Detroit Dynamite Blasts Cincinnati by 7-4

Tigers Explode Power in Seventh With Four Runs on Four Lusty Clouts

Tommy Bridges Baffles Reds All Way while Jim Turner Fails in Fatal Seventh

By JUDSON BAILEY

DETROIT, Oct. 4 (AP)—The dynamite in the bats of the Detroit Tigers exploded again today with two reverberating home runs and a total of 13 hits to blast the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 4, and give the American league champions a two games to one advantage in the 1940 world series.

The explosion, amounting to six runs and four runs in the seventh inning, shattered what had been a masterful pitching performance by two Tennessee curveballers, Tommy Bridges and Jim Turner, and sent the 52,877 enthusiastic Detroit fans into such ecstasy the game had to be halted several times to clean up the paper and other debris they showered on the outfield.

Pop Like Fire-Crackers

The hits just started popping like a package of Chinese fire-crackers—a single by Hank Greenberg, a home run by Rudy York, a single by Vince Campbell, another homer by Jimmy Higgins. Nobody was on and nobody was out Turner gave up to the ghost.

Whitey More succeeded in setting down the next two batters, but he, too, gave up a single to Dick Bartell and a double to Barney McCosky and was in desperate straits when Harley Gehringer finally raised a pop foul to end the shooting.

The contest as a whole was a curious mixture of really great pitching and equally emphatic hitting.

For a time it seemed that Turner, a seasoned right-hander who won 15 and lost 7 in the National League this year, was going to get the best

Axis Trying To Defeat FDR, He Tells Reporters

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP) — In response to a press conference question, President Roosevelt quickly and pointedly called attention today to a newspaper dispatch from Rome saying that the Axis powers were "out to defeat" him in the coming election.

To this he added an assertion that generally speaking, all aid short of war was going to England and that discussions have been in progress on he possibility of training Canadian fliers in private aviation schools in this country during the coming winter.

Not only did the president call attention to the newspaper article—the leading story in this morning's issue of the New York Times, which is supporting Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee—but he quoted at length from a copy which lay upon his desk.

After citing a paragraph saying the primary purpose of the Axis was to keep the United States out of war and "prevent or minimize its help to Great Britain," and that the German-Italian-Japanese military treaty of last week was in pursuance of those objectives, he read the following passage:

Axis Against Roosevelt

"Moreover, the Axis is out to defeat President Roosevelt, not as a measure of interference in the internal policies of the United States but because of the president's foreign policy and because of everything he stands for in the eyes of the Italians and Germans.

"The coming United States election is realized to be of vast importance to the Axis. Therefore the normal strategy for the Axis is to do something before Nov. 5 that would somehow have a great effect on the electorial campaign."

The subject had been brought up at the press conference by Earl Godwin, a radio news commentator.

Former Bund Member Tells of Plot To Hang 'Some New York Bankers'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP) — A soft-spoken farmer storm trooper of the German-American Bund told the Dies Committee today that Bund members once planned to march on Wall street and hang some big bankers."

The German-born witness, Richard Werner, 36, also asserted that training in military maneuvers and street fighting was given to members of the "O. D." Aaordnungs Dienst, or order service—the military section of the Bund.

"What did the storm troopers plan to do to the bankers?" asked J. B. Matthews, committee investigator, after the witness had mentioned "Morgan" and "Kuhn and Loeb" as prospective victims.

"We were going to hank them up on the nearest post or tree," Werner replied.

The entire training of the O. D. organization was pointed for "the day . . . the time blood will flow in the streets of the United States," he continued.

"What did you understand 'the day' to mean?" asked Rep. Starnes (D-Ala), chairman of a sub-committee on the committee on un-American activities.

"The overthrow of this government and establishment of a government like they have in Nazi Germany," answered Werner.

The witness told the committeemen that from the time he first come to this country in 1926 he had never been out of work for more than one week, until last February when he withdrew from the Bund.

Since then, asked Starnes, had you been blacklisted by the Bund with respect to employment?

"That's my impression, although I can't prove it," Werner said.

Nazis Repulsed In Short Attacks On London Proper

Two Night Raids Are Declared To Have Been Unproductive

BOMBING MARKS END OF FOURTH WEEK OF DRIVE

Nazi Planes and Big Guns Continue Attacks on Shore Cities

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 5.—(Saturday)—German bombers made two stabs at London last night and early today but quit sooner than usual in the face of murky weather obscuring their targets.

Gunfire was heard in the suburbs and central London during the first raid but in the second there were no explosions in the city proper. An earth-jarring anti-aircraft barrage greeted them on both occasions and shrapnel fell like hail over most of the metropolis.

The assault was concentrated in the northwestern and southwestern areas, but bombs fell, too, in the very center of London. One smashed through the glass roof of a railway station, just missing a ticket collector and a passenger, but no casualties were reported there.

(Both the Waterloo and Victoria stations are roofed with glass.)

The attack spread out from here to the industrial midlands and other areas of England and Wales.

It was the customary follow-up to daytime raids in which the Nazis, flying solo or in tight little wedges, joined the German big Berthas of Cap Gris Nez in scorching the English shores and ship lanes with bomb blast and shell fire yesterday.

End of Fourth Week

It was the end of the fourth terrible week of punishment for England's capital, and tonight, beneath a sky like one vast piece of water-soaked cotton, central London's anti-aircraft roared furiously for two hours to keep new raiders at a distance.

Along the southeast shores of the island, over chalk cliffs and feudal castles, the bombers came today—usually one at a time—dropping their loads from low clouds on the areas that might become the bridgeheads for invasion. British officials said their work was "haphazard;" but acknowledged that the towns and villages of the southeast were hard hit and that there

Large Brick Building in Indiana Destroyed by Blast

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 4. (AP)—An explosion and fire wrecked a Terre Haute chemical plant tonight and brought immediate indications of Federal Bureau of Investigation activity in the case.

The north section of the Commercial Solvents Corporation's plant—a 200-foot square brick building—was destroyed when a 30,000-gallon acetone still exploded. The still was in a tower atop the building.

One man was missing and feared to have been killed, two others were hurt slightly and four more escaped harm. The missing man.

T. P. Walker, president of the corporation, said in New York that all of the firm's industrial research was done in the plant here and that it was handling no government defense contracts.

Nevertheless, Earl J. Winn, head of the FBI office at Indianapolis, left for Terre Haute as soon as he was notified of the explosion.

Every available fireman was called to duty to keep the fire which followed the blast from spreading to other sections of the big chemical factory.

Republican Candidate Says He Will Lead Nation Back to Work; Says America Is Still Unsafe

By WILLIAM B. ARDERY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4. (AP) — Wendell L. Willkie, declaring that "attack is closer than ever—America is still unsafe," told a loudly cheering throng tonight that the nation needs prosperity and an adequate defense "on hand" instead of "on order."

From a flower-banked rostrum in Shibe park, Willkie asserted that the New Deal "has lacked the ability to get things done," and said that instead of placing orders only for tanks and airplanes, it also had "on order" the factories in which to build them.

Given Loud Welcome

Back in Philadelphia for the first time since his nomination here in June, the Republican presidential candidate was given a loud welcome when he walked to the platform with Mrs. Willkie.

He told the crowd, estimated by Police Captain James Bernard at 25,000, that for seven years the nation has had "prosperity on order."

SAID TO HAVE CHARTED "NEW EUROPE" MAKEUP

World Expects Astonishing News To Be Announced Soon

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, Oct. 4 (AP) — Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini spent three and a half hours together today in an armored car in the Brenner Pass, gateway of the Axis, and tonight officially inspired German commentators declared their decisions would chart not only the course of the war but the whole make-up of the "new Europe."

Accustomed to look for stunning sequels to these meetings of the dictators, the German people, both official and unofficial, except that when the Axis-made propositions are unfolded they will again astonish the world.

Actually, in keeping with Axis policy, the official communique and the Italian and German press accounts dealing with this sixth meeting of the dictators speak only in glittering generalities.

Many indications point, however, to the Balkans as one prime subject of discussion. Undoubtedly, the United States, the three-power pact signed last week among Italy, Germany and Japan, the position of Spain and the future of Africa also were topics.

Yugoslavia May Enter

Yugoslavia has been wooed consistently of late by the Axis, and the result is likely to appear soon.

Greece has been put under persistent pressure, first by the German press, now by the Italian.

The wily Franz von Papen, Germany's ambassador, has been exceedingly busy in Turkey; the Bulgarian minister of agriculture is the guest of the German nation these days.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, a news commentary service considered as receiving official inspiration, said "the physiognomy of the new Europe" was "decisively determined" at Brennero, the little town on Italian soil, in the cradle of the Axis Alps, where the dictators talked.

It continued: "the subjects discussed exceeded in significance even

Defense Program Hit by Jackson, Rep. Taber Says

New York Congressman Raps Opinion of Attorney General

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP)—Rep. Taber (R-NY) declared in the House today that the effect of an opinion by Attorney General Jackson regarding labor policies of national defense contractors is "sabotage of the defense program."

Jackson sent an informal opinion to Sidney Hillman of the National Defense Commission in which he asserted that the decisions of the National Labor Relations Board were "binding and conclusive" upon all other branches of the executive department.

Taber interpreted this to mean that firms found guilty by the labor board of violating the Wagner Labor Act might be denied defense contracts. He declared that, if carried out, the policy would invalidate thirty percent of the defense contracts already let.

Rep. Case (R-SD) interjected that Congress should not adjourn until "that situation is remedied."

Rep. Routzohn (R-Ohio), who also denounced the opinion in a floor speech, said it had created "a furore" among members of both parties and might well complicate Democratic leaders' plans for taking a long election recess starting next week.

Routzohn, who said in his speech that there was "no basis in law" for Jackson's ruling, expressed the

Zivic Beats Armstrong For Welterweight Title

Twelve Thousand Fans Scream Approval of 15-Round Bout

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — The perpetual motion machine of the ring ran down tonight and a new world's welterweight champion was crowned.

Fritzie Zivic, a rough, tough Pittsburgh kid who learned his fighting as a bouncer in his father's saloon, closed both Henry (Buzz-Saw) Armstrong's eyes in the first half of their fight, and then danced out of harm's reach the rest of the way scoring with lefts and rights to out point 11'l perpetual motion and take the 147-pound crown by a 15-round decision.

A screaming crowd of 12,081, who contributed to a gross gate of $29,212, sat in on the most astonishing upset in Madison Square Garden in years.

Zivic went into the ring a 1 to 4 underdog against the eternally rushing fighting machine, who had made ring history by defending his title successfully nineteen times in the past and is the only man ever to hold three world crowns simultaneously.

The unexpected happened. Zivic, starting slowly in his first 15-round fight, connected with short right uppercuts in the early rounds. These did the damage that caused the championship to change hands for the first time since Armstrong took the title from Barney Ross in May, 1938.

Armstrong Blinded

By the ninth round, Armstrong's left eye was a slit and his right

New Pressure May Be Brought against Turkey as the Result of Startling Developments

BUCHAREST, Oct. 4. (AP)—Rumanian secret police, investigating alleged sabotage of German-bound gasoline shipments, are attempting to prove that British agents also inspired the mass killings of several thousand Iron Guardists last year, it was learned on high authority tonight.

By ELMER W. PETERSON

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Oct. 4 (AP)—With German-made planes cruising protectively over Rumania's oil fields and the Italian army jockeying along Albania's Greek frontier, southeastern Europe looked tonight for a new Axis offensive, probably diplomatic.

A stronger Nazi-Fascist policy in this corner of the continent, including new pressure against pro-British Greece, was indicated.

Balkan political circles were convinced that Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini devoted a good share of their Brenner pass meeting today to discussion of a possible new "prestige" campaign in this area.

They expected new efforts to get Greece to cancel Britain's guarantee of help against any threat to Greek independence.

Some observers believed the new Axis program may include an invitation to Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania to join the Axis in a military alliance as part of new pressure against Greece and Turkey, which also has British ties.

The sight of Messerschmitts among eighteen planes in "defensive reconnaissance flight" over Rumanian oil fields was taken as

Japan Warns U. S. Of War Peril If Axis Is Attacked

Premier Konoye Says Fighting Will Be To a Finish

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Oct. 4 — Japan thrust two sharp warnings at the United States today that any challenge of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis would tumble her into a "fight to a finish."

Premier Prince Konoye, in his first interview since the signing of the three-power pact, emphasized Japan's stiffened attitude toward America with the declaration that:

"Whether the Pacific will become the scene of war or peace solely depends on whether Japan and the United States respect each other's position. At the present, there is no concrete idea of taking the initiative in negotiations with the United States."

Urges New World Order

Konoye, whose interview was with the Japanese press at Kyoto, urged the United States to throw in her lot with the Axis by "positively cooperating with their construction of a new world order."

"Nevertheless," he added, "should the United States deliberately refuse to understand the true intentions of Japan, Germany and Italy and consider the triple alliance hostile to herself and challenge the Axis nations, the Axis would be ready to accept such a challenge and fight to a finish."

Simultaneously, Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, in a na-

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president, declared tonight that "our entire trade with the far east is not worth the cost of one year's expansion and upkeep of our navy. It is not worth one week of war."

CIO Steel Workers Delay Strike In Bethlehem Steel Company Plant

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 4. (AP)—The CIO's steel workers organizing committee today deferred any strike action against the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, averting a tie-up of work on almost $1,000,000,000 of national defense contracts for army equipment and ships.

At the conclusion of a two-day meeting of SWOC chieftains, however, the union announced it had asked Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, "in the interests of national defense" to meet SWOC officers to discuss "orderly industrial relations based upon company compliance with the law of the country."

Bittner in Charge

The union also disclosed at the conference, called to consider a possible strike against Bethlehem, that Van A. Bittner, SWOC regional director at Chicago, had been named to supervise SWOC activities in the company's plants. He succeeded E. J. Lever, who in the future will assist Bittner.

Any further action in the Bethlehem negotiations was left to a general committee of officers headed by Chairman Philip Murray, who has charged Bethlehem "resorted to trickery" to evade payment of minimum wages on government contracts as provided by the Walsh-Healey act.

Murray, in a letter to Grace, said:

"In the interests of national defense, I am calling upon you and your company to meet with officers of the steel workers organizing committee to discuss the establishment of orderly industrial relations and thereby assure recognition by Bethle-

Actually, in keeping with Axis policy, the official communique and the Italian and German press accounts dealing with this sixth meeting of the dictators speak only in glittering generalities.

Many indications point, however, to the Balkans as one prime subject of discussion. Undoubtedly, the United States, the three-power pact signed last week among Italy, Germany and Japan, the position of Spain and the future of Africa also were topics.

Yugoslavia May Enter

Yugoslavia has been wooed consistently of late by the Axis, and the result is likely to appear soon.

Greece has been put under persistent pressure, first by the German press, now by the Italian.

The wily Franz von Papen, Germany's ambassador, has been exceedingly busy in Turkey; the Bulgarian minister of agriculture is the guest of the German nation these days.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, a news commentary service considered as receiving official inspiration, said "the physiognomy of the new Europe" was "decisively determined" at Brennero, the little town on Italian soil, in the cradle of the Axis Alps, where the dictators talked.

Subjects in Doubt

It continued: "the subjects discussed exceeded in significance even

New York Congressman Raps Opinion of Attorney General

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP)—Rep. Taber (R-NY) declared in the House today that the effect of an opinion by Attorney General Jackson regarding labor policies of national defense contractors is "sabotage of the defense program."

Jackson sent an informal opinion to Sidney Hillman of the National Defense Commission in which he asserted that the decisions of the National Labor Relations Board were "binding and conclusive" upon all other branches of the executive department.

Taber interpreted this to mean that firms found guilty by the labor board of violating the Wagner Labor Act might be denied defense contracts. He declared that, if carried out, the policy would invalidate thirty percent of the defense contracts already let.

Rep. Case (R-SD) interjected that Congress should not adjourn until "that situation is remedied."

Rep. Routzohn (R-Ohio), who also denounced the opinion in a floor speech, said it had created "a furore" among members of both parties and might well complicate Democratic leaders' plans for taking a long election recess starting next week.

Routzohn, who said in his speech that there was "no basis in law" for Jackson's ruling, expressed the

Zivic Beats Armstrong For Welterweight Title

Twelve Thousand Fans Scream Approval of 15-Round Bout

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — The perpetual motion machine of the ring ran down tonight and a new world's welterweight champion was crowned.

Fritzie Zivic, a rough, tough Pittsburgh kid who learned his fighting as a bouncer in his father's saloon, closed both Henry (Buzz-Saw) Armstrong's eyes in the first half of their fight, and then danced out of harm's reach the rest of the way scoring with lefts and rights to out point 11'1 perpetual motion and take the 147-pound crown by a 15-round decision.

A screaming crowd of 12,081, who contributed to a gross gate of $29,212, sat in on the most astonishing upset in Madison Square Garden in years.

Zivic went into the ring a 1 to 4 underdog against the eternally rushing fighting machine, who had made ring history by defending his title successfully nineteen times in the past and is the only man ever to hold three world crowns simultaneously.

The unexpected happened. Zivic, starting slowly in his first 15-round fight, connected with short right uppercuts in the early rounds. These did the damage that caused the championship to change hands for the first time since Armstrong took the title from Barney Ross in May, 1938.

Armstrong Blinded

By the ninth round, Armstrong's left eye was a slit and his right

Both Germany and Italy Believed Preparing for An Invasion of Greece

New Pressure May Be Brought against Turkey as the Result of Startling Developments

BUCHAREST, Oct. 4. (AP)—Rumanian secret police, investigating alleged sabotage of German-bound gasoline shipments, are attempting to prove that British agents also inspired the mass killings of several thousand Iron Guardists last year, it was learned on high authority tonight.

By ELMER W. PETERSON

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Oct. 4 (AP)—With German-made planes cruising protectively over Rumania's oil fields and the Italian army jockeying along Albania's Greek frontier, southeastern Europe looked tonight for a new Axis offensive, probably diplomatic.

A stronger Nazi-Fascist policy in this corner of the continent, including new pressure against pro-British Greece, was indicated.

Balkan political circles were convinced that Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini devoted a good share of their Brenner pass meeting today to discussion of a possible new "prestige" campaign in this area.

They expected new efforts to get Greece to cancel Britain's guarantee of help against any threat to Greek independence.

Some observers believed the new Axis program may include an invitation to Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania to join the Axis in a military alliance as part of new pressure against Greece and Turkey, which also has British ties.

The sight of Messerschmitts among eighteen planes in "defensive reconnaissance flight" over Rumanian oil fields was taken as

Premier Konoye Says Fighting Will Be To a Finish

By The Associated Press

TOKYO, Oct. 4 — Japan thrust two sharp warnings at the United States today that any challenge of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis would tumble her into a "fight to a finish."

Premier Prince Konoye, in his first interview since the signing of the three-power pact, emphasized Japan's stiffened attitude toward America with the declaration that:

"Whether the Pacific will become the scene of war or peace solely depends on whether Japan and the United States respect each other's position. At the present, there is no concrete idea of taking the initiative in negotiations with the United States."

Urges New World Order

Konoye, whose interview was with the Japanese press at Kyoto, urged the United States to throw in her lot with the Axis by "positively cooperating with their construction of a new world order."

"Nevertheless," he added, "should the United States deliberately refuse to understand the true intentions of Japan, Germany and Italy and consider the triple alliance hostile to herself and challenge the Axis nations, the Axis would be ready to accept such a challenge and fight to a finish."

Simultaneously, Yakichiro Suma, foreign office spokesman, in a na-

Greeks Prepare To Repel Italians

ATHENS, Oct. 4. (AP)—The Greek army is taking "preventative measures" against any surprise move by Italian forces massing along the border of neighboring Albania, an authoritative source said tonight.

Border advices said some 130,000 Fascist troops were facing the Greek frontier, backed up by 120 tanks. They were said to have arrived from Italy during the last two weeks of September.

Observers from this side said the Italians have been busy digging trenches, with their activity especially pronounced in the last few days.

Thomas Cautions U. S. On Cost of War

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for president, declared tonight that "our entire trade with the far east is not worth the cost of one year's expansion and upkeep of our navy. It is not worth one week of war."

"To gamble with bluffs and threats against the Japanese militarists x x x is to risk the most inexcusable and the most costly war in our history," he said in a speech prepared for an anti-war rally of the Keep America Out of War Congress.

CIO Steel Workers Delay Strike In Bethlehem Steel Company Plant

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 4 (AP)—The CIO's steel workers organizing committee today deferred any strike action against the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, averting a tie-up of work on almost $1,000,000,000 of national defense contracts for army equipment and ships.

At the conclusion of a two-day meeting of SWOC chieftains, however, the union announced it had asked Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, "in the interests of national defense" to meet SWOC officers to discuss "orderly industrial relations based upon company compliance with the law of the country."

Bittner in Charge

The union also disclosed at the conference, called to consider a possible strike against Bethlehem, that Van A. Bittner, SWOC regional director at Chicago, had been named to supervise SWOC activities in the company's plants. He succeeded E. J. Lever, who in the future will assist Bittner.

Any further action in the Bethlehem negotiations was left to a general committee of officers headed by Chairman Philip Murray, who has charged Bethlehem "resorted to trickery" to evade payment of minimum wages on government contracts as provided by the Walsh-Healey act.

Murray, in a letter to Grace, said:

"In the interests of national defense, I am calling upon you and your company to meet with officers of the steel workers organizing committee to discuss the establishment of orderly industrial relations and thereby assure recognition by Bethle-

British Bombard Coast of Holland In Daylight Raid

Also Said To Have Hit Many Barges along Coast of France

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 4—Royal Air Force pilots rode afar today, bombing the German-held coast of Holland in a continuing counter offensive that already had struck from western Germany in the channel ports of France.

Simultaneously, the admiralty disclosed that British naval planes had returned to the distant Norwegian theater of war sinking a 2,000 ton Nazi supply ship in Bjorne fjord south of Bergen and leaving a 5,000-tonner "heavily on fire in fore and after holds" alongside the jetty at Haugesund. One British dive bomber went down in this foray.

The RAF's new daylight attacks on The Netherlands shore were described in the spare, dry phraseology of the aid ministry's first announcement simply as directed at Nazi "objectives."

Hit German Barges

But in wide, earlier assaults the RAF was declared to have hit many German barges—of the type assembled for the long-awaited invasion of England that has never come—as they lay in the winding Maas river off the river port of Heusden, Holland, and to have accomplished elsewhere a broad mission of destruction.

These, the British declared officially, were some of the actions:

A German convoy of twelve merchant ships, escorted by warships, bombed off Dunkerque by a British squadron that swept down low through the mists.

Two shipping basins in Rotterdam attacked; communications and oil storage reservoirs bombed in the Cherbourg port region; a steel factory in western Germany, near Wesel, attacked.

Nine Submarines Destroyed

While the air force thus carried on without letup its counter-offensive against invasion, the admiralty announced the destruction of an Italian destroyer and nine submarines, seven German and two Italian.

The destroyer was torpedoed by a British submarine, the admiralty said, and the other vessels by action by British naval and air forces.

In making the announcement, the admiralty acknowledged:

"The enemy has recently been having a greater measure of success of the U-boat attacks on merchant shipping than during the earlier stages of the war." But it was added, this had been expected "after the collopse of France and the German seizure of the French Atlantic ports."

Postman Killed by Alleged Insane Man

DECATUR, Ga., Oct. 4 (AP) — A member of a wealthy family in fashionable Druid Hills near here ran amok today, killing a postman, beating his aged mother and generally terrorizing the neighborhood.

Chief J. T. Dailey, who arrested the man after kicking down three doors in the seventeen-room mansion, said he was L. F. Scott, 38, who lived with his mother and an unmarried sister and had no business connection.

The officer expressed the opinion Scott had suddenly gone insane. He was charged with the murder of the postman, R. C. Woods, Jr., 30, who was delivering a package to Mrs. F. A. Goldberg across the street.

Scott had been quietly watering his lawn, Daily said, when he shot at eleven-year old Joel Goldberg and began firing promiscuously.

Woods was shot seven times, Dailey said, after which Scott broke his rifle over the body and threw the barrel at a passing car.

Dailey said he found the man pummeling his mother, Mrs. L. F. Scott, Sr., 80, in a room of the home.

The mother was declared tonight to be in a critical condition.

The sister, Miss Irene Scott, was not at home.

Browder Sees War Under Willkie or FDR

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — Earl Browder, Communist candidate for president, charged tonight in a nationwide broadcast that President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie were agreed on major policies and that the policies led to war.

Addressing youth, Browder attacked American conscription as "preparation for plunging this country into the world-wide scramble for empire."

Browder in a speech prepared for delivery over the air mentioned an "unchallenged note, sounded from Washington, that 'the United States may be at war by next spring, if not sooner.'"

"Conscription, militarization, and very soon a place in the very vortex of the imperialist world slaughter—these are the prospects held out to American youth by both Roosevelt and Willkie," he added.

the complex questions treated during the last two meetings of the Axis foreign ministers." These conversations, between Count Ciano of Italy and Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany, were climaxed by the signing of the three-power pact.

Dienst then underscored the fact that both diplomatic and military experts accompanied the duce and the fuehrer. The communique itself said Col. General Wilhelm von Keitel, chief of the Nazi high command, sat in on the last part of the talk.

The National Zeitung of Essen, a paper close to Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, further pointed out that Hitler and Mussolini met as supreme commanders of their armed forces, more than as heads of their governments.

Rome's accounts of the meeting, however, said the dictators were not seeking to involve any other country in the war; indicated Spain's non-belligerency was established for the time being; said the talks did not concern Soviet Russia; and dealt with no sort of peace move. Reports that Ciano might later see Russia's Premier-Foreign Minister Molotoff were not denied.

Discuss Long War

The Italians hinted that Axis-American relations were discussed, stressed the possibility of a long war and one enlarged on the African front and, like the Germans, said the dictators were so confident of victory that they can now draft "the great constructive lines of their new European and African edifice."

One German paper with close foreign office connections — the Hamburger Fremdenblatt — called attention to the fact that the results of the last Brenner Pass meeting of Mussolini and Hitler, shortly before the final offensive against France, "became visible only a few weeks later by Fascist Italy's declaration of war on the western powers."

The paper left unsaid whether it expected a similar declaration by Spain within the next several weeks. It did assert that the meeting was an "object lesson" to Britain's Prime Minister Churchill in taking the initiative.

Says War Is Broader

"The war," it said, "has broadened from a European conflict between Britain and the continent led by Germany and Italy into a final struggle for the new world organization against British universalism."

The dictators met with their usual brief show of ceremony on a scarlet, flower-banked platform of the Brennero station, and the German accounts of the meeting stressed its cordiality. Bands played "The Horst Wessel Lied," "Deutschland" and "Giovanezza," the Axis anthems; German and Fascist honor guards stamped and saluted.

Ringing the armored trains of the dictators were strong anti-aircraft batteries, manned by both Germans and Italians.

Mussolini was there half an hour early.

The talks were in the Italian dictator's train, and lasted through luncheon in Il Duce's dining car.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Whatever its fruition, the conference of Messrs. Hitler and Mussolini in dark Brenner Pass was primarily a war council.

The Axis dictators were concerned with ways and means of cracking the hard nut of British resistance that seems only to grow harder the more it is pounded by German bombs.

From this corner, two observations by Nazi and Fascist press commentators on the Brenner meeting seem to make the most sense. Both sound a highly realistic note.

A German paper reputed to be "close to" the No. 2 Nazi, Marshal Goering, flatly states it was a session of military commanders-in-chief, not of heads of states. The Fascist comment echoed that in other words. It said problems of a "long war" with Britain, instead of the hoped for short struggle, called the dictators into personal conference.

That is more credible than the notion that they foregathered to weigh still unsettled questions of their projected "new order."

British Bomb Germany

In any event, British bombers seized the occasion to go a-bombing by daylight over German-held targets in Holland and elsewhere across channel. Prime Minister Churchill has defined the "cruz" of the battle of Britain as daylight air mastry over England. It still rests sufficiently with the British fighter force to have given the Brenner conferees something to talk about not to their liking.

Presumably, however, definite action must flow from their meeting, and soon. Military and home prestige reasons join hands to indicate that.

German and Italian public opinion has been taught by dramatic events and propaganda to ascribe infallibility to the two great men of the Axis. It would be both unprecedented and damaging to their prestige if this meeting proved a mere talk-fest, with tangible results in action.

Non-Belligerents Worried

No non-belligerent nation in Europe, east or west, can rest easy until the Axis new basis for attack on British on her life lines of the sea, or provide additional food stores for the Axis mates and their conquered dependents this winter, those international bystanders would be in grave danger.

That is what alarms Greece. A shift of Axis strategy to make the Mediterranean the main war theater this winter may be at hand. Greece is doubly threatened because she could furnish close up basis for joint Axis air attack on British sea power in the Mediterranean, and because a menacing gesture toward Greece might force British naval and air power to her aid under London commitments to Athens. That would ease pressure on the sea flank of the Italian army, now no more than started on its long road across Egypt toward the Suez canal.

May Plan Invasion

The reverse of that could be a Brenner decision on Italian air aid for Germany in a stepped-up, all-out attack on England in preparation for invasion despite the unfavorable weather outlook. British apprehensions of an invasion must necessarily revive until the meaning of the Brenner conference is clear.

About the only certain thing about the conference yet is that it flowed out of Britain's stout-hearted and unexpected resistance, and that something definite to intensify the Axis warfare against her must come of it, and soon. Time is a vital element in Axis strategy.

opinion to newsmen that it was an attempt by New Dealers to "win the support of John L. Lewis."

an indication of the manner in which that country is coming under German military protection and guidance.

Rumors of government changes favorable to the Axis were current in Sofia, Bulgarian capital, while in Hungary membership in the now United Hungarian Nazi party was reported gaining rapidly.

King Boris of Bulgaria awarded the superlative order of St. Alexander today to German Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering and the Berlin and Rome foreign ministers, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano.

Balkan press reports from Berlin and Rome significantly discussed "possible extension of the Axis European front" and reports from all Balkan capitals indicated a developing political nervousness.

The prevailing impression was that the Axis, held up in western Europe, now is planning a more active Mediterranean and near east policy in which a tight hold on southeastern Europe was considered essential.

Bulgaria's minister of agriculture, Ivan Bagrianoff, widely discussed as the next premier in a rumored change of government, prepared to depart for Berlin and Rome at the invitation of the Axis agricultural ministries.

Jean Zay Sentenced To Perpetual Exile

CLERMONT-FERRAND, France, Oct. 4 (AP)—Jean Zay, former French minister of education, was sentenced today by a court martial to military degradation and perpetual exile.

While the decree provided for his banishment for life—probably to some island yet to be selected—court officials said that in fact he probably would be freed by the chief of the French state after a ten-year period.

Despite his plea that he was no deserter, Zay was convicted of having left France last June with former Premier Edouard Daladier and other former officials while he still was a second lieutenant in the army transport section.

The court martial called it "desertion before the enemy."

Zey's trial was apart from the "war responsibilities" cases which will come before the Supreme Court at Riom. Daladier, former Air Minister Guy La Chambre and former Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin already have been formally committed for trial there.

Italy Not Worried Over U. S. Election

ROME, Oct. 4 (AP)—Virginio Gayda, Mussolini's frequent mouthpiece, said tonight that Italy didn't care who won the United States presidential race.

In any case, he argued, the Axis would win the European war.

The receiver has now distributed a total of $1,672,900.23. The sixth distribution was for seven per cent of the total owed.

Newall Dropped As Head of RAF

LONDON, Oct. 4. (AP)—A surprise shuffle in the RAF command tonight switched Air Chief Marshal Sir Cyril Newall, the man who built the modern RAF, to the key post of governor-general of New Zealand in the south Pacific.

Air Marshal Sir Charles Portal, 47-year-old head of the RAF bomber command, succeeded Cir Cyril, giving the youngest fighting service its youngest chief for a stepped-up air war against Germany.

Sir Cyril, 54, succeeds Viscount Galway.

Portal's successor is Air Marshal Sir Richard Ueirse, who was appointed in April as a vice-chief of the air staff.

Sir Charles has been in charge of the air forces' nightly raids on Germany as chief of the bomber command, and has been described in the service as a man "with relentless tenacity of purpose."

His appointment reflected RAF policy of admitting the advantages of young minds among the highest personnel, and it was thought likely that an increased offensive activity against Germany would follow.

Zivic Beats

Unable to see, Henry charged in wildly, trying to put on the crusher as he felt his crown slipping. As a result, it was no trick for Fritzie to dance away, pecking with his left and tossing a booming right to the heart and to the head.

Game to the end, Henry was still charging in at the finish. In the last round, he nearly stumbled to his knees once, he half fell through the ropes another time, and was staggering under the punishment through the final two minutes. But he kept his feet just until the bell rang. Then he collapsed near Zivic's corner and had to be carried to his stool.

Henry Seems Slower

At 142 pounds, he seemed slower than in the past, and, as in all his previous major starts, he spotted his rival poundage. Fritzie scaled 145½.

Despite Zivic's fast finish through the last half of the bout, he held no very wide margin. The decision was unanimous, with the referee and both judges each giving him eight rounds. On the Associated Press score card, Fritzie won nine rounds and Henry six.

It was a rough, tough, thriller all the way and as early as the third round it was obvious that Henry not only didn't figure as a lop-sided favorite tonight, but that he also had nowhere near the soft touch he has encountered in brushing off the nineteen previous challengers to his crown—fifteen of them by knockout.

In his dressing room later, he explained, "I felt my left eye going in the third round, and later on it was closed up tight."

Keeps On Fighting

Yet, he marched right out and, continually pressing forward, was way out in front through the first six heats as Zivic went on the defensive.

In the sixth and seventh, Fritzie started to throw left hooks to the body and kept banging away with those short, sharp right uppercuts.

Dancing backward through the ninth and tenth, he pummeled Armstrong going away, and, in the latter heat, broke open both Henry's eyes. Blood oozed from both optics, and was sprinkled over both fighters and Referee Arthur Donovan.

From there to the finish, except for a brief flurry in the thirteenth, it was just a gallant fighter sticking it out, but with no chance against a cool, smart ring general.

Knew He "Had Him"

The twenty-six-year-old Zivic, unmarked, revealed later that he knew from the tenth round on he "had him."

"I heard him start puffing then, and I knew dead sure it was all mine."

In the main prelim, little Petey Scalzo, the National Boxing Association's world featherweight champion, was the victim of one of the year's fistic surprise packages. Julie Kogon, New Haven, came on after a slow start to gash Petey's left eye, floor him for counts of eight in the sixth round and six in the seventh, and win an eight-round decision. Kogan weighed 132½; Scalzo, 128½.

Roosevelt Plans To Spend Busy Month

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP)—President Roosevelt arranged to leave for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., tonight on a trip which may be the first of a series keeping him on the go in the month remaining before the election, and even afterward.

Half a dozen speeches, from formal addresses to brief, extemporaneous talks, will be worked into Mr. Roosevelt's program, starting with one tomorrow at Hyde Park. In that, he will dedicate three schools in the vicinty of his home. It will be broadcast by two chains.

One of the major trips will be a tour next week of defense establishments in Western Pennsylvania and Ohio. White House announcement today of details of the itinerary brought a statement from Representative Thomas (R-Ohio) that Mr. Rosevelt had been "frightened" by the reception accorded Wendell Willkie in that section and was arranging to follow on the Republican nominee's heels.

While on the Pennsylvania-Ohio tour, Mr. Rosevelt will make a major address Oct. 12 to all of North and South America on hemispheric defense. He will speak by radio from a private railway car at Dayton, Ohio.

Politics

form, the crowd set up a shout, "we want Willkie."

Hundreds of seats were occupied in the infield, but some sections at the ends of the grandstand were not filled.

Willkie's presence brought a prolonged shout from the audience continuing until he stood in acknowledgement.

Willkie Promises Work

In his speech, Willkie accused the New Deal of putting politics before defense needs and declared that, if elected, he would "lead this nation back to work."

"Only production — not orders—can defend us from aggressors."

Willkie termed the nation's defenses even less adequate than four years ago, charged the Roosevelt administration with "blocking the creative forces of our people," and declared:

"The longer the United States remains incompetent to defend itself, the closer we are drawn toward war. We must stop that drift toward war.

Knows How To Lead

"I want to lead the fight for peace. I know how to lead that fight."

Willkie's speech, broadcast only within Pennsylvania, climaxed a swing across Pennsylvania which began in Pittsburgh and carried him today through Harrisburg, Lancaster and Catesville. He reached Philadelphia by special train at 2:30 p. m. (EST) and launched immediately into a round of brief speeches that took him through miles of city streets.

"I could take a million boos, and they wouldn't hurt," Willkie said once. "The man that it hurts is the man who boos, because he has closed his mind."

Candidate Cheered

There were cheers when the candidate concluded, "give me a square shake, boys—that's what I want; that's what you want."

Later he told an applauding Republican organization meeting in town hall:

"The only thing we have to defeat is billions of dollars, and Americans never have been afraid of pure brute force."

Referring to President Roosevelt repeatedly but only as "the third term candidate," Willkie declared that the New Deal has known for "many years" that the nation was faced with a preparedness problem. It has not lacked the knowledge or the money to build speedily for defense, he said, but "has lacked the ability to get things done."

"It has lacked a fundamental regard for the forces that make democracy strong," the Republican candidate said of the administration he seeks to oust.

Refers to French Fiasco

Willkie compared the Roosevelt government with France under Premier Leon Blum, an administration he termed the French "New Deal." Citing figures which he said showed a decline in French industrial production two years ago, Willkie told his audience:

"We, too, turned downward in 1938 x x x because the New Deal was absorbed in its own political objectives: the attack against business and the attack against the Supreme Court."

If the United States had been able to send 7,000 military airplanes to the European Democracies last year, the G.O.P. standard-bearer said, the aid would have "given the Democracies another lease on life x x x would have changed the whole course of history."

Reason for Our Failure

"The reason for our failure," Willkie asserted, "was that the New Deal theorists and the New Deal politicians blocked the creative forces of our people.

"They could have provided new jobs for thousands of young men by building up American aircraft production to defense requirements. Instead, they kept those thousands idle on relief rolls.

"Relief was politically more attractive than defense."

Willkie challenged administration estimates of defense materials "on order" with an assertion that he knew of two manufacturers with big contracts for tanks and airplanes who had not even completed the necessary factory buildings.

"So what we are really talking about is not tanks or airplanes on order—but factories on order," he said.

The Republican candidate declared that "a grim task" lies ahead for the United States—"the task of arming our democracy so fully and so rapidly that the aggressors will not dare to strike."

"For every moment that we have lost," he warned, "I see for our grandchildren x x x a more dangerous world.

"This is the challenge to our generation. For our own sake, but still more for theirs, we must arm America now!"

Giving estimates of times required to produce primary instruments of defense, Willkie said "we shall be lucky" to turn out 7,000 fighting planes this year—"little more than half the rate of twenty years ago." At the close of the World war, he said, America was producing one thousand planes a month.

Wants Defense Chairman

The Republican nominee touched once more on a theme he has hammered throughout his campaign that President Roosevelt should appoint a chairman of the National Defense Advisory Council.

"The able men on that council cannot get things done because the third term candidate has kept all the power in his hands," he asserted.

The first step toward peace, he concluded, "is to put a job in every home, the second step is to mobilize American industry x x x.

"We must awake, x x x join me in building x x x new America, so strong, so full of hope that we can keep the peace that we want, the democracy that we want, and the liberties that we want.

"That is my plan for America."

Axis Trying

who inquired whether Mr. Roosevelt had "any reason to believe Germany and Italy are working for your defeat in the election."

President "Amused"

The president's answer was to read the paragraph quoted above, and then Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether he had "any reason to believe the story was true." Chuckling, the president replied that he was merely quoting the press back at the correspondents. It was just a newspaper story, he said, and he was a little amused by it.

The conference quickly moved on to other things having to do with foreign policy. A reporter mentioned that in some quarters it was contended that American assistance to Great Britain was below the level of the president's "all aid short of war formula."

As a gheral proposition that statement was untrue, the president responded, but he could not make the same reply if questioned about specific items and articles which the British need.

In reply to further questioning, the president said there had been no discussion of training Canadian fliers at air fields in the southern United States, but that there had been conversation regarding training in private flying schools.

A Canadian, he said, has a right to come to the United States and get training in a private school where he would pay tuition, adding that what he did with the knowledge was a matter to be determined when he returned to Canada.

Mr. Roosevelt further told reporters that Canada had bought some tanks of world war type from the United States for training purposes. Not many were bought, he said, and he doubted whether most of them would move under their own power.

Hundreds of windows were broken in the neighborhood. Witnesses said the tank at the top of the building was lifted high into the air by the explosion.

A series of minor explosions occurred in the research laboratory as some flames reached it.

Nine Civilians Wounded

Once, over the Thames estuary, a four-engined super-bomber came from the clouds and dropped its great bombs. They wounded nine persons.

In the dawn, the German coast guns on the French shore opened up through the murk against a British convoy, creeping around Cap Gris Nez promontory, but its own barrage balloons and rounds roared but the convoy got to its course.

Twice before dusk the sirens howled in London. Bombs fell in the central, northern and eastern parts of the city, demolishing buildings and houses and burying occupants, living and dead.

Nazi Planes Return

Then, earlier than usual, the Nazi came back for their night assault on the city.

During one daylight raid, King George himself was in central east London, inspecting air raid shelters with the new "shelter tator," Admiral Sir Edward E "Evans of the Broke". Guns were in the distance, but no bombs near the king.

For the king it was a crossection view of life underground the world's greatest city.

Visiting one east-end rest feeding center, he told an eight five-year old refugee:

"I think you're all so wonderful the way you carry on in spite it all."

Two "Doctors" Confer

Throughout all this, the Eng turned their scorn upon the meeting of the Axis dictators in Brenner Pass.

They likened it to a consultation between two doctors over a patient who has taken a turn for the worse.

There were cheering words for those who are fighting the battle of England, factory workers and home folks alike.

Herbert Morrison, the new minister of home security, told factory workers they had also "helped to save our country."

Henry Willing, London's housing commissioner, announced, "London has won its battle" and declared that those made homeless by bombs "practically all have been housed."

London's millions, he added, have "only one fear—their own fear of being frightened."

Konoye emphasized that the empire is prepared to reorganize the existing position of the United States in the Americas, provided the United States showed the same consideration to it with reference to East Asia and the far east. He reiterated that the three-power alliance was not aimed at any other power.

Japan will continue her efforts to reach an understanding with Soviet Russia, Konoye asserted, but declared Japan is firmly opposed to Communism and would not tolerate its spread in the Orient.

Japanese trade negotiations with The Netherlands East Indies are proceeding smoothly, he added, and "fairly favorable results are expected."

British Bombard Coast of Holland In Daylight Raid

Also Said To Have Hit Many Barges along Coast of France

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Oct. 4—Royal Air Force pilots rode afar today, bombing the German-held coast of Holland in a continuing counter offensive that already had struck from western Germany in the channel ports of France.

Simultaneously, the admiralty disclosed that British naval planes had returned to the distant Norwegian theater of war sinking a 2,000 ton Nazi supply ship in Bjorne fjord south of Bergen and leaving a 5,000-tonner "heavily on fire in fore and after holds" alongside the jetty at Haugesund. One British dive bomber went down in this foray.

The RAF's new daylight attacks on The Netherlands shore were described in the spare, dry phraseology of the aid ministry's first announcement simply as directed at Nazi "objectives."

Hit German Barges

But in wide, earlier assaults the RAF was declared to have hit many German barges—of the type assembled for the long-awaited invasion of England that has never come—as they lay in the winding Maas river off the river port of Heusden, Holland, and to have accomplished elsewhere a broad mission of destruction.

These, the British declared officially, were some of the actions:

A German convoy of twelve merchant ships, escorted by warships, bombed off Dunkerque by a British squadron that swept down low through the mists.

Two shipping basins in Rotterdam attacked; communications and oil storage reservoirs bombed in the Cherbourg port region; a steel factory in western Germany, near Wesel, attacked.

Nine Submarines Destroyed

While the air force thus carried on without letup its counter-offensive against invasion, the admiralty announced the destruction of an Italian destroyer and nine submarines, seven German and two Italian.

The destroyer was torpedoed by a British submarine, the admiralty said, and the other vessels by action by British naval and air forces.

In making the announcement, the admiralty acknowledged:

"The enemy has recently been having a greater measure of success of the U-boat attacks on merchant shipping than during the earlier stages of the war." But it was added, this had been expected "after the collapse of France and the German seizure of the French Atlantic ports."

Postman Killed by Alleged Insane Man

DECATUR, Ga., Oct. 4 (AP) — A member of a wealthy family in fashionable Druid Hills near here ran amok today, killing a postman, beating his aged mother and generally terrorizing the neighborhood.

Chief J. T. Dailey, who arrested the man after kicking down three doors in the seventeen-room mansion, said he was L. F. Scott, 38, who lived with his mother and an unmarried sister and had no business connection.

The officer expressed the opinion Scott had suddenly gone insane. He was charged with the murder of the postman, R. C. Woods, Jr., 30, who was delivering a package to Mrs. F. A. Goldberg across the street.

Scott had been quietly watering his lawn, Daily said, when he shot at eleven-year old Joel Goldberg and began firing promiscuously.

Woods was shot seven times, Dailey said, after which Scott broke his rifle over the body and threw the barrel at a passing car.

Dailey said he found the man pummeling his mother, Mrs. L. F. Scott, Sr., 80, in a room of the home.

The mother was declared tonight to be in a critical condition.

The sister, Miss Irene Scott, was not at home.

Browder Sees War Under Willkie or FDR

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — Earl Browder, Communist candidate for president, charged tonight in a nationwide broadcast that President Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie were agreed on major policies and that the policies led to war.

Addressing youth, Browder attacked American conscription as "preparation for plunging this country into the world-wide scramble for empire."

Browder in a speech prepared for delivery over the air mentioned an "unchallenged note sounded from Washington, that 'the United States may be at war by next spring, if not sooner'."

"Conscription, militarization, and very soon a place in the very vortex of the imperialist world slaughter—these are the prospects held out to American youth by both Roosevelt and Willkie," he added.

the complex questions treated during the last two meetings of the Axis foreign ministers." These conversations, between Count Ciano of Italy and Joachim von Ribbentroo of Germany, were climaxed by the signing of the three-power pact.

Dienst then underscored the fact that both diplomatic and military experts accompanied the duce and the fuehrer. The communique itself said Col. General Wilhelm von Keitel, chief of the Nazi high command, sat in on the last part of the talk.

The National Zeitung of Essen, a paper close to Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, further pointed out that Hitler and Mussolini met as supreme commanders of their armed forces, more than as heads of their governments.

Rome's accounts of the meeting, however, said the dictators were not seeking to involve any other country in the war; indicated Spain's non-belligerency was established for the time being; said the talks did not concern Soviet Russia; and dealt with no sort of peace move. Reports that Ciano might later see Russia's Premier-Foreign Minister Molotoff were not denied.

Discuss Long War

The Italians hinted that Axis-American relations were discussed, stressed the possibility of a long war and one enlarged on the African front and, like the Germans, said the dictators were so confident of victory that they can now draft "the great constructive lines of their new European and African edifice."

One German paper with close foreign office connections — the Hamburger Fremdenblatt — called attention to the fact that the results of the last Brenner Pass meeting of Mussolini and Hitler, shortly before the final offensive against France, "became visible only a few weeks later by Fascist Italy's declaration of war on the western powers."

The paper left unsaid whether it expected a similar declaration by Spain within the next several weeks. It did assert that the meeting was an "object lesson" to Britain's Prime Minister Churchill in taking the initiative.

Says War Is Broader

"The war," it said, "has broadened from a European conflict between Britain and the continent led by Germany and Italy into a final struggle for the new world organization against British universalism."

The dictators met with their usual brief show of ceremony on a scarlet, flower-banked platform of the Brennero station, and the German accounts of the meeting stressed its cordiality. Bands played "The Horst Wessel Lied," "Deutschland" and "Giovanezza," the Axis anthems; German and Fascist honor guards stamped and saluted.

Ringing the armored trains of the dictators were strong anti-aircraft batteries, manned by both Germans and Italians.

Mussolini was there half an hour early.

The talks were in the Italian dictator's train, and lasted through luncheon in Il Duce's dining car.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Whatever its fruition, the conference of Messrs. Hitler and Mussolini in dark Brenner Pass was primarily a war council.

The Axis dictators were concerned with ways and means of cracking the hard nut of British resistance that seems only to grow harder the more it is pounded by German bombs.

From this corner, two observations by Nazi and Fascist press commentators on the Brenner meeting seem to make the most sense. Both sound a highly realistic note.

A German paper reputed to be "close to" the No. 2 Nazi, Marshal Goering, flatly states it was a session of military commanders-in-chief, not of heads of states. The Fascist comment echoed that in other words. It said problems of a "long war" with Britain, instead of the hoped for short struggle, called the dictators into personal conference.

That is more credible than the notion that they foregathered to weigh still unsettled questions of their projected "new order."

British Bomb Germany

In any event, British bombers seized the occasion to go a-bombing by daylight over German-held targets in Holland and elsewhere across channel. Prime Minister Churchill has defined the "cruz" of the battle of Britain as daylight air mastry over England. It still rests sufficiently with the British fighter force to have given the Brenner conferees something to talk about not to their liking.

Presumably, however, definite action must flow from their meeting, and soon. Military and home prestige reasons join hands to indicate that.

German and Italian public opinion has been taught by dramatic events and propaganda to ascribe infallibility to the two great men of the Axis. It would be both unprecedented and damaging to their prestige if this meeting proved a mere talk-fest, with tangible results in action.

Non-Belligerents Worried

No non-belligerent nation in Europe, east or west, can rest easy until the Axis new basis for attack on British on her life lines of the sea, or provide additional food stores for the Axis mates and their conquered dependents this winter, those international bystanders would be in grave danger.

That is what alarms Greece. A shift of Axis strategy to make the Mediterranean the main war theater this winter may be at hand. Greece is doubly threatened because she could furnish close up basis for joint Axis air attack on British sea power in the Mediterranean, and because a menacing gesture toward Greece might force British naval and air power to her aid under London commitments to Athens. That would ease pressure on the sea flank of the Italian army, now no more than started on its long road across Egypt toward the Suez canal.

May Plan Invasion

The reverse of that could be a Brenner decision on Italian air aid for Germany in a stepped-up, all-out attack on England in preparation for invasion despite the unfavorable weather outlook. British apprehensions of an invasion must necessarily revive until the meaning of the Brenner conference is clear.

About the only certain thing about the conference yet is that it flowed out of Britain's stout-hearted and unexpected resistance, and that something definite to intensify the Axis warfare against her must come of it, and soon. Time is a vital element in Axis strategy.

opinion to newsmen that it was an attempt by New Dealers to "win the support of John L. Lewis."

an indication of the manner in which that country is coming under German military protection and guidance.

Rumors of government changes favorable to the Axis were current in Sofia, Bulgarian capital, while in Hungary membership in the now United Hungarian Nazi party was reported gaining rapidly.

King Boris of Bulgaria awarded the superlative order of St. Alexander today to German Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering and the Berlin and Rome foreign ministers, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano.

Balkan press reports from Berlin and Rome significantly discussed "possible extension of the Axis European front" and reports from all Balkan capitals indicated a developing political nervousness.

The prevailing impression was that the Axis, held up in western Europe, now is planning a more active Mediterranean and near east policy in which a tight hold on southeastern Europe was considered essential.

Bulgaria's minister of agriculture, Ivan Bagrianoff, widely discussed as the next premier in a rumored change of government, prepared to depart for Berlin and Rome at the invitation of the Axis agricultural ministries.

Jean Zay Sentenced To Perpetual Exile

CLERMONT-FERRAND, France, Oct. 4 (AP)—Jean Zay, former French minister of education, was sentenced today by a court martial to military degradation and perpetual exile.

While the decree provided for his banishment for life—probably to some island yet to be selected—court officials said that in fact he probably would be freed by the chief of the French state after a ten-year period.

Despite his plea that he was no deserter, Zay was convicted of having left France last June with former Premier Edouard Daladier and other former officials while he still was a second lieutenant in the army transport section.

The court martial called it "desertion before the enemy."

Zey's trial was apart from the "war responsibilities" cases which will come before the Supreme Court at Riom. Daladier, former Air Minister Guy La Chambre and former Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin already have been formally committed for trial there.

Italy Not Worried Over U. S. Election

ROME, Oct. 4 (AP)—Virginio Gayda, Mussolini's frequent mouthpiece, said tonight that Italy didn't care who won the United States presidential race.

In any case, he argued, the Axis would win the European war.

Bank Checks Mailed

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4 (AP)—Checks totaling $225,064.50 were mailed today in the sixth distribution account in the receivership estate of the Hagerstown, Md., Bank and Trust Company, State Bank Commissioner John W. Downing announced.

The receiver has now distributed a total of $1,672,900.23. The sixth distribution was for seven per cent of the total owed.

Newall Dropped As Head of RAF

LONDON, Oct. 4 (AP)—A surprise shuffle in the RAF command tonight switched Air Chief Marshal Sir Cyril Newall, the man who built the modern RAF, to the key post of governor-general of New Zealand in the south Pacific.

Air Marshal Sir Charles Portal, 47-year-old head of the RAF bomber command, succeeded Cir Cyril, giving the youngest fighting service its youngest chief for a stepped-up air war against Germany.

Sir Cyril, 54, succeeds Viscount Galway.

Portal's successor is Air Marshal Sir Richard Ueirse, who was appointed in April as a vice-chief of the air staff.

Sir Charles has been in charge of the air forces' nightly raids on Germany as chief of the bomber command, and has been described in the service as a man "with relentless tenacity of purpose."

His appointment reflected RAF policy of admitting the advantages of young minds among the highest personnel, and it was thought likely that an increased offensive activity against Germany would follow.

Unable to see, Henry charged in wildly, trying to put on the crusher as he felt his crown slipping. As a result, it was no trick for Fritzie to dance away, pecking with his left and tossing a booming right to the heart and to the head.

Game to the end, Henry was still charging in at the finish. In the last round, he nearly stumbled to his knees once, he half fell through the ropes another time, and was staggering under the punishment through the final two minutes. But he kept his feet just until the bell rang. Then he collapsed near Zivic's corner and had to be carried to his stool.

Henry Seems Slower

At 142 pounds, he seemed slower than in the past, and, as in all his previous major starts, he spotted his rival poundage. Fritzie scaled 145½.

Despite Zivic's fast finish through the last half of the bout, he held no very wide margin. The decision was unanimous, with the referee and both judges each giving him eight rounds. On the Associated Press score card, Fritzie won nine rounds and Henry six.

It was a rough, tough, thriller all the way and as early as the third round it was obvious that Henry not only didn't figure as a lop-sided favorite tonight, but that he also had nowhere near the soft touch he has encountered in brushing off the nineteen previous challengers to his crown—fifteen of them by knockout.

In his dressing room later, he explained, "I felt my left eye going in the third round, and later on it was closed up tight."

Keeps On Fighting

Yet, he marched right out and, continually pressing forward, was way out in front through the first six heats as Zivic went on the defensive.

In the sixth and seventh, Fritzie started to throw left hooks to the body and kept banging away with those short, sharp right uppercuts.

Dancing backward through the ninth and tenth, he pummeled Armstrong going away, and, in the latter heat, broke open both Henry's eyes. Blood oozed from both optics, and was sprinkled over both fighters and Referee Arthur Donovan.

From there to the finish, except for a brief flurry in the thirteenth, it was just a gallant fighter sticking it out, but with no chance against a cool, smart ring general.

Knew He "Had Him"

The twenty-six-year-old Zivic, unmarked, revealed later that he knew from the tenth round on he "had him."

"I heard him start puffing then, and I knew dead sure it was all mine."

In the main prelim, little Petey Scalzo, the National Boxing Association's world featherweight champion, was the victim of one of the year's fistic surprise packages. Julie Kogon, New Haven, came on after a slow start to gash Petey's left eye, floor him for counts of eight in the sixth round and six in the seventh, and win an eight-round decision. Kogan weighed 132½; Scalzo, 128½.

Roosevelt Plans To Spend Busy Month

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP)—President Roosevelt arranged to leave for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., tonight on a trip which may be the first of a series keeping him on the go in the month remaining before the election, and even afterward.

Half a dozen speeches, from formal addresses to brief, extemporaneous talks, will be worked into Mr. Roosevelt's program, starting with one tomorrow at Hyde Park. In that, he will dedicate three schools in the vicinity of his home. It will be broadcast by two chains.

One of the major trips will be a tour next week of defense establishments in Western Pennsylvania and Ohio. White House announcement today of details of the itinerary brought a statement from Representative Thomas (R-Ohio) that Mr. Rosevelt had been "frightened" by the reception accorded Wendell Willkie in that section and was arranging to follow on the Republican nominee's heels.

While on the Pennsylvania-Ohio tour, Mr. Rosevelt will make a major address Oct. 12 to all of North and South America on hemispheric defense. He will speak by radio from a private railway car at Dayton, Ohio.

Politics

form, the crowd set up a shout, "we want Willkie."

Hundreds of seats were occupied in the infield, but some sections at the ends of the grandstand were not filled.

Willkie's presence brought a prolonged shout from the audience continuing until he stood in acknowledgement.

Willkie Promises Work

In his speech, Willkie accused the New Deal of putting politics before defense needs and declared that, if elected, he would "lead this nation back to work."

"Only production — not orders—can defend us from aggressors."

Willkie termed the nation's defenses even less adequate than four years ago, charged the Roosevelt administration with "blocking the creative forces of our people," and declared:

"The longer the United States remains incompetent to defend itself, the closer we are drawn toward war. We must stop that drift toward war.

Knows How To Lead

"I want to lead the fight for peace. I know how to lead that fight."

Willkie's speech, broadcast only within Pennsylvania, climaxed a swing across Pennsylvania which began in Pittsburgh and carried him today through Harrisburg, Lancaster and Catesville. He reached Philadelphia by special train at 2:30 p. m. (EST) and launched immediately into a round of brief speeches that took him through miles of city streets.

"I could take a million boos, and they wouldn't hurt," Willkie said once. "The man that it hurts is the man who boos, because he has closed his mind."

Candidate Cheered

There were cheers when the candidate concluded, "give me a square shake, boys—that's what I want; that's what you want."

Later he told an applauding Republican organization meeting in town hall:

"The only thing we have to defeat is billions of dollars, and Americans never have been afraid of pure brute force."

Referring to President Roosevelt repeatedly but only as "the third term candidate," Willkie declared that the New Deal has known for "many years" that the nation was faced with a preparedness problem. It has not lacked the knowledge or the money to build speedily for defense, he said, but "has lacked the ability to get things done."

"It has lacked a fundamental regard for the forces that make democracy strong," the Republican candidate said of the administration he seeks to oust.

Refers to French Fiasco

Willkie compared the Roosevelt government with France under Premier Leon Blum, an administration he termed the French "New Deal." Citing figures which he said showed a decline in French industrial production two years ago, Willkie told his audience:

"We, too, turned downward in 1938 x x x because the New Deal was absorbed in its own political objectives: the attack against business and the attack against the Supreme Court."

If the United States had been able to send 7,000 military airplanes to the European Democracies last year, the G.O.P. standard-bearer said, the aid would have "given the Democracies another lease on life x x x would have changed the whole course of history."

Reason for Our Failure

"The reason for our failure," Willkie asserted, "was that the New Deal theorists and the New Deal politicians blocked the creative forces of our people.

"They could have provided new jobs for thousands of young men by building up American aircraft production to defense requirements. Instead, they kept those thousands idle on relief rolls.

"Relief was politically more attractive than defense."

Willkie challenged administration estimates of defense materials "on order" with an assertion that he knew of two manufacturers with big contracts for tanks and airplanes who had not even completed the necessary factory buildings.

"So what we are really talking about is not tanks or airplanes on order—but factories on order," he said.

The Republican candidate declared that "a grim task" lies ahead for the United States—"the task of arming our democracy so fully and so rapidly that the aggressors will not dare to strike."

"For every moment that we have lost," he warned, "I see for our grandchildren x x x a more dangerous world.

"This is the challenge to our generation. For our own sake, but still more for theirs, we must arm America now!"

Giving estimates of times required to produce primary instruments of defense, Willkie said "we shall be lucky" to turn out 7,000 fighting planes this year—"little more than half the rate of twenty years ago." At the close of the World war, he said, America was producing one thousand planes a month.

Wants Defense Chairman

The Republican nominee touched once more on a theme he has hammered throughout his campaign that President Roosevelt should appoint a chairman of the National Defense Advisory Council.

"The able men on that council cannot get things done because the third term candidate has kept all the power in his hands," he asserted.

The first step toward peace, he concluded, "is to put a job in every home, the second step is to mobilize American industry x x x.

"We must awake, x x x join me in building x x x new America, so strong, so full of hope that we can keep the peace that we want, the democracy that we want, and the liberties that we want.

"That is my plan for America."

who inquired whether Mr. Roosevelt had "any reason to believe Germany and Italy are working for your defeat in the election."

President "Amused"

The president's answer was to read the paragraph quoted above, and then Mr. Roosevelt was asked whether he had "any reason to believe the story was true." Chuckling, the president replied that he was merely quoting the press back at the correspondents. It was just a newspaper story, he said, and he was a little amused by it.

The conference quickly moved on to other things having to do with foreign policy. A reporter mentioned that in some quarters it was contended that American assistance to Great Britain was below the level of the president's "all aid short of war formula."

As a gneral proposition that statement was untrue, the president responded, but he could not make the same reply if questioned about specific items and articles which the British need.

In reply to further questioning the president said there had been no discussion of training Canadian fliers at air fields in the southern United States, but that there had been conversation regarding training in private flying schools.

A Canadian, he said, has a right to come to the United States and get training in a private school where he would pay tuition, adding that what he did with the knowledge was a matter to be determined when he returned to Canada.

Mr. Roosevelt further told reporters that Canada had bought some tanks of world war type from the United States for training purposes. Not many were bought, he said, and he doubted whether most of them would move under their own power.

They're Smarter Than We Thought

Dr. Koch Taught Trixie To Clean Laboratory

AP Feature Service

Newark, N. J., Oct. 5—Trixie is making a monkey out of man, who always thought his ability to use tools distinguished him from monkeys.

Trixie, a South American Blackface, is part of the psychological laboratory equipment at Essex Junior College. The president of the college, Dr. Adolph M. Koch, and two Columbia University professors have found that monkeys can be taught to use rakes, clean laboratories with brooms and hoses and do errands.

Trixie uses a rake with wild sweeps to bring a pile of raisins within reaching distance.

Trader, another blackface, used to help the laboratory caretaker clean the floor. One day the caretaker found that Trader himself had littered the floor. He yelled in indignation. It seemed that South American blackfaces don't like to be yelled at. The caretaker was bitten 18 times and Trader was banished to a zoo.

When Trixie was learning what rakes are good for, a cookie was tied under the rake handle to put across the idea that a rake should be pulled toward the raker.

Monkey Business

They're Smarter Than We Thought

Dr. Koch Taught Trixie To Clean Laboratory

AP Feature Service

Newark, N. J., Oct. 5—Trixie is making a monkey out of man, who always thought his ability to use tools distinguished him from monkeys.

Trixie, a South American Blackface, is part of the psychological laboratory equipment at Essex Junior College. The president of the college, Dr. Adolph M. Koch, and two Columbia University professors have found that monkeys can be taught to use rakes, clean laboratories with brooms and hoses and do errands.

Trixie uses a rake with wild sweeps to bring a pile of raisins within reaching distance.

Trader, another blackface, used to help the laboratory caretaker clean the floor. One day the caretaker found that Trader himself had littered the floor. He yelled in indignation. It seemed that South American blackfaces don't like to be yelled at. The caretaker was bitten 18 times and Trader was banished to a zoo.

When Trixie was learning what rakes are good for, a cookie was tied under the rake handle to put across the idea that a rake should be pulled toward the raker.

But you'll probably keep your walls modern and let your furniture and draperies satisfy the Regency trend in your house.

Trend toward Willkie Is Now Unmistakable

AS the campaign for the presidency enters its final month an unmistakable trend toward Wendell Willkie has set in. The major campaign strategy of the Republican candidate and his managers thus appears to be succeeding.

In June Willkie sentiment reached a peak that caused nothing short of dismay in the ranks of the New Dealers and worried the Republican candidate's advisers. It was felt by the latter that there was danger of a mushroom boom that might not endure until election day. The candidate practically withdrew from the spotlight for a time to permit his support to become consolidated on a secure foundation.

It was decided to give the campaign everything the candidate and his party, plus the anti-third term Democrats, had in the final month to inflate the Willkie boom on the eve of the election.

It is evident that this strategy is being applied now and the temporarily enthusiastic third termers are again beginning to worry.

Willkie's style of face-to-face campaigning is getting results and now promises to have his opponent hanging on the ropes when the bell rings. Mr. Roosevelt, of course, would not be able to conduct a campaign as strenuous as that upon which Mr. Willkie is thriving—and, anyway, he has said that he is not thinking of politics.

But there appears to be an astounding number of defense projects, located in districts where votes hang heaviest, that require inspection just at this time. Unless Mr. Roosevelt holds himself in, his role of inspector general of defense is likely to prove almost as arduous as would a campaign for the presidency.

Mr. Willkie is striking telling blows at Mr. Roosevelt's record in office since 1933. Fiscal incompetence, deficits, fifty billion dollar debt, soaring taxes, unpreparedness, experimentation—all are being effectively attacked by the Republican candidate. It is daily becoming plainer that the American way of life would be seriously endangered by four more years of Roosevelt.

The New Deal rebuttal to all of this to date consists of a few eggs hurled at Mr. Willkie by New Dealers in the Michigan sit down sector, where lawlessness unparalleled in the history of the nation was indulged in three years ago, while the man in the White House not only did nothing to stop it but conferred daily over the telephone with the state's New Deal governor, the final result being that a Munich pact was forced upon the forces of law and order.

For his part in forcing industry to surrender to lawlessness, Governor Murphy was rewarded by President Roosevelt with a perch on the Supreme Court of the United States, a post for which he is obviously unfitted.

The attention of the nation is being directed to the Roosevelt record by Mr. Willkie, and it is a record that is seen to be shoddy indeed when exposed to the light.

Mr. Byron an Opponent Of the Hatch Measures

NOT MANY PERSONS interested in clean government will dispute the statement that the two Hatch laws, the first enacted in July, 1939, and the second a year later, represents one of the greatest steps ever taken by this government to divorce pernicious political activities from governmental affairs.

These laws prohibit such activity by government employes and by state workers paid wholly or in part with federal funds. They should serve to stop the disgraceful coercion of WPA and other relief workers, giving them the opportunity to express their own convictions on government. The acts also limit campaign contributions and total expenditures in elections.

Yet, if Representative William D. Byron, of the Sixth Maryland district—the Western Maryland ballwick—would have his way, the Hatch laws would never have been enacted. Mr. Byron is against any such purification of political practices.

Mr. Byron does not do much voting in the House of Representatives, as the record has shown, although theoretically he was sent to Washington for that very purpose. Usually he manages to be away somewhere when important decisions are made on legislation. Mr. Byron probably holds a record for absenteeism. Just whether it is his social or business duties or whether it is indicative of his convictions one is left to guess, but if he were sufficiently interested about important measures, it is to be presumed that he would be on hand when the voting as well as the debating takes place. Frequently he is paired. On other occasions he just doesn't vote. But usually he is somewhere else.

Such was the case when the two important Hatch measures came up for decision in the House of Representatives. He was not on the floor of the House when the first Hatch act came to a vote, but he is entitled to credit for having indicated his opposition by being paired against it. Then, when the extension of the act was voted upon, Mr. Byron's voice was not heard. The record lists him then as "not voting."

Hence, while being absent or not voting in these instances, he is nevertheless on record as being in opposition to these meritorious measures.

If Walter P. Johnson, or even if Charley Stewart, had been a member of the House when those votes were taken, the Western Maryland district would have had its approval voiced in behalf of these Hatch bills.

Johnson, the present Republican nominee, can be depended upon to be on hand in the House when important measures are up for consideration and the votes are taken. He is a man of the people and his time will not be preoccupied with social, business or other activities to such an extent as virtually to put the Western Maryland district without representation in the House, which has unfortunately been the case most of the time during Byron's tenure.

A Legendary Street Now Piker Stuff

THE ANCIENT SOAP-BOX PRACTICE of slam-banging "Wall Street" has been resorted to by Henry A. Wallace, the hand-picked New Deal nominee for vice president. By "Wall Street" is meant by the soap-boxers a group of selfish, powerful and wealthy individuals who are sitting back smugly and pulling the strings that run the country, although as a matter of fact the designation is merely that of the chief financial center of the country and includes as well the doings of "Main Street" through natural agency.

Even so, the former bugaboo of Wall Street is pretty much of a dead horse today. An editorial writer in the Cincinnati Times-Star describes its present status. "The street today," he says, "is a lane of half-empty office buildings. Its denizens, like the occupants of thousands of brokers' offices throughout the land, spend most of their time waiting for customers' calls, playing solitaire, talking over old times with dwindling office forces or wondering where next month's rent is coming from. To these unhappy men, the notion that Wall Street is a great financial octopus whose tenacles reach into every political office in the country is a subject for sardonic laughter."

For those who perchance wish to know where the real center of financial power now exists in the United States, the Times-Star writer supplies the information. It is, he explains, a building on Pennsylvania avenue in Washington called the United States treasury, and "compared to the operations, financial and political, of that institution, Wall Street is piker stuff and always was."

The pertinent suggestion is made that Mr. Wallace, with his experience in dispensing billions to farmers, ought to know that. He should, indeed.

It was to let him devote himself to architectural jobs running into millions, that the Democratic National Committee kindly accepted the resignation of L. W. (Blue Chip) Robert.

Pity the school book publishers whose latest geographies, by the time they reach the pupils, prove nothing more than history books.

The colored tack formerly signifying the late Trotsky among trouble areas on the world may has been duly shifted to the Orient.

Browsings among Books

By MARSHALL MASLIN

If you pick up "The Family", which is the novel which won the Little Brown Company's $10,000 prize for Nina Fedorova, and glance through it only casually in an effort to catch the feeling of the book, the turn of phrase, the rhythm of the writing, you will probably set the book down in about five minutes and say: "I don't see how this book ever won that contest!" And your judgment will be precisely correct.

Marshall Maslin

Here is a novel that is, from the Browser's point of view toward writing, very badly written, without distinction of style. It is stodgy and prosaic to the flitting eye and few readers would give it a fair chance if they didn't know it for a prize-winner and therefore, supposedly, a book of sound worth. Which is exactly what it is. More than that, it is distinguished, written by a woman of noble passions and understanding. Tolstoi would have read it with sympathy and admiration and understood its compassion and decency.

The book is rich in character and in characters—and the Browser is grateful to Madame Fedorova for writing a story in which sorrow and humor are so humanly interwoven.

Have you a chess player in your family? If so, the Browser suggests that you give him Sturges M. Schley's mystery story, "Who'd Shoot a Genius?" (Random) this Christmas. It will keep him away from the chess table for a few hours, at any rate . . . and it is one of the most civilized mystery stories the Browser has ever read. Witty, subtle, delightful it has only the one fault that it cannot possibly be as appreciated by non-chess players as by those strange folk who rush through their meals to get at the chessmen.

Quentin Toby is a doctor, whose business is straightening out the quirks in the human mind. To his office comes a lovely lady whose husband had been violently killed some months before. He was a famous author, brutal to her, and she had no grief over his taking-off. However, everybody had accepted his death as suicide. She was sure he had been murdered and she wanted his death to be a murder because that would mean $50,000 of insurance money for her.

So Toby, who is no detective, sets out to prove the man was murdered, find the murderer, and collect the $50,000. A delightful story, with many charming individuals, male and female, in it—and a surprising solution (which the Browser wouldn't dream of revealing to you).

A greater mystery than anyone you will find in any conventional "mystery story" is the theme of Maurice Samuel's "The Great Hatred" (Knopf)—which Pierre Van Paasen describes as "the most comprehensive, forceful and uncompromising work on the fundamental thesis of anti-Semitism".

Maurice Samuel was born in Roumania, educated at the University of Manchester. He came to this country in 1914 and hoboed through the Middle West. He worked in a tire factory, served two years in the army and was an interpreter at the 1919 peace conference. Since then he has written ten books and has lived nearly ten years in Palestine. He has no shallow or conventional approach to the problem of anti-Semitism and he spares neither Christian nor Jew in his analysis or his conclusions. He is profoundly, not merely cleverly, original and he feels very deeply that "The Great Hatred" of the Jews is a symptom of the world's drive toward self-destruction.

"Anti-Semitism is much more important than the Jew", he believes, "its ravages only begin with the Jewish people. A world in which anti-Semitism has triumphed will be a hell for the surviving Jews; it will also be a hell for every human being in whom a spark of moral principle has survived."

NOTE: The Viking Press announces that on September 20th, when it published St. Clair McKelway's "Gossip: The Life and Times of Walter Winchell"—Mr. McKelway took a plane from Lima, Peru, and flew still further south toward the Straits of Magellan (and away from Mr. Winchell). Enough from Marsh Maslin.

Hinckley Defends Training Program For Civilian Pilots

Editor Cumberland News:

Gen. Hugh Johnson recently delivered himself of a severe attack upon the CAA Civilian Pilot Training program. In general it consisted of papaphrasing an earlier and more severe attack in an aviation trade magazine, "American Aviation," by its editor, Wayne W. Parrish. In fact, Gen. Johnson gave Mr. Parrish as authority for several of his statements.

Gen. Johnson, in his column, made numerous serious misstatements. He said the program is "a plan to train 50,000 pilots for military and naval service." This is simply not true. It is a plan to train civilian pilots, in varying degrees, as a reservoir from which the armed forces can draw pilot material.

It is the hope that the more advanced of these students—graduates of the secondary course—can be trained by the armed forces into military pilots in a considerably shorter time than without this training.

Valuable as Feeder

Gen. Johnson says "no military or naval authority is very clearly on record" on this point. If he had taken one glance at the printed record of the appropriation hearings for this program, held on May 29, 1940, he could have learned that both Brig. Gen. Jacob Fickel, assistant chief of the army air corps, and Capt. George D. Murray, of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, testified clearly their belief that the program would be a valuable "feeder" to the military services. They testified in considerable detail, for anyone to read who was interested in the facts.

Gen. Johnson calls the pilot-training program "a slapped-together hay crate organization of civilian pilots," and doubts that "a safe and uniform course of instruction can be given." He says the program is "not properly supervised" and "dangerous."

A little casual reading in the aviation field would have shown Gen. Johnson that his informant, Wayne Parrish, stands alone among aviation publishers in his bitter attitude toward the pilot-training program. Surely this would suggest a bug under the chip, somewhere, to any fair-minded person.

The Safety Angle

As to the safety and efficiency of the program, here is part of a telegram sent September 20 by William Brinckerhoff, New York aviation insurance specialist:

"As one vitally interested in insurance and safety aspects of pilot training program since origin I am amazed at editorial last issue 'American Aviation.' Before program began student accident insurance cost $30 per $1,000, whereas program has produced such continuously good safety record as to have enjoyed reductions in cost each session including 10 per cent for fall (1940) session giving $3,000 death benefit, $500 hospitalization for only $9 compared best available cost of $20 for students outside program. Surely accidents not concealed from insurance companies who would be called on to pay death or hospital claims, and surely rates would not be reduced in face of any such record as 'American Aviation' indicates . . . Problems can be solved if uniformed critics do not sabotage this vital defense project. Keep up good work."

Praised as Miracle

General Johnson did not state—and may not know—that his informant, Wayne Parrish, wrote high praise of this program only three months ago, on July 1, 1940, calling its safety record "a Twentieth century miracle," describing it as "so far beyond anything previously established for flight training as to be in a different mathematical world," and praising the letting of the training to private flying firms "instead of creating a vast bureaucracy." This, now, General Johnson calls "a slapped-together hay crate organization."

The magazine "Sportsman Pilot" said on August 15: "The instruction is so superior to training available before the program was launched that comparisons are futile." It added "the entire training . . . is executed in a scientific and controlled manner."

"Aviation" magazine said in April: "The CAA flight training program has brought other benefits . . . Insurance rates are down to new lows . . . Airports are better . . . Flight instruction is definitely better . . . Airplanes are also better."

"National Aeronautics" magazine said in July: "...So thorough has been the training under this program that the first graduates are 'far above' the average of civilians of equal flight experience trained by usual methods of instruction."

The Washington Star said in September: "It is encouraging to note that in spite of great expansion and speeding up of the civil program, safety standards higher than any ever before known in civilian pilot training are being maintained."

The "slapped-together hay crate organization" at which Gen. Johnson sneers consists of the heads of about 700 commercial flying-schools from coast to coast. Many of these men helped pioneer this industry, and they are the backbone of private flying in the United States today.

In this training program they are setting records surpassing anything the country ever saw before, and nearly all the interested commentators seem to know it except Mr. Parrish and Gen. Johnson.

ROBERT H. HINCKLEY,
Assistant Secretary of Commerce
Washington,
October 3, 1940.

The Evidence

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

From the time the defense program was launched, it has been the fashion in New Deal circles to take pot shots at business. Every delay in getting defense orders moving has been attributed to the selfishness of industrial leaders. Business men were under fire throughout the debate on war profits taxation and industrial conscription.

But what are the facts? Here they are, from a man who above all others ought to know—William S. Knudsen, of the National Defense Advisory Commission:

"Every so often some statement comes out implying that manufacturers are holding back and not cooperating. In the four months I have been in Washington, I have talked to a lot of manufacturers, large and small, and I have still to find one who is not willing to do everything he could to help the program, even to the extent of turning his design of motor over to someone else to make because he could not handle the large quantity himself."

That attitude always has been true of American business. But it seems to be an inseparable part of the New Deal program to smear business at every opportunity.

THE OVERWORKED HERRING

Defeat of Five Senators in Primaries Raises Query As to Victors' Chances

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

For a senator to be beaten for re-election isn't so bad. Some states are close, as between the two major parties. They're always liable to go one way at some particular juncture and the other way the next time. Even a state that's been politically pretty one-sided occasionally flops over, with changing times and new issues.

Sen. Ashurst

For instance, Iowa, when I lived there, years ago, always went Republican by a big majority. Today it has two Democratic senators. The Willkieites believe it will flop back again next November. Should it do so, though, it won't make any immediate difference to those two Democrats. Neither one is up for re-election this year.

The point is, a senator, who has served a term or several terms, doesn't have to feel particularly humiliated if his opposition party opponent out-votes him on election day. It isn't personal to him that he's beaten. It's his party that takes the licking.

But it must be very painful to a senator to have his own party turn him down for a renomination. The plain implication of that is that the identical aggregation which chose him in the first place disapproves of the fashion in which he's represented it in office. He's known all along that his original opposition was against him. It's a different thing for him to feel that the same crowd that initially selected him, is firing him, as a disappointment to it.

Five Senatorial Casualties

There have been five such senatorial casualties during this year's primaries—an unusual number.

The victims are Senators Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona, William H. King of Utah, Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota, Edward R. Burke of Nebraska and Rush D. Holt of West Virginia.

The cases of Senators Ashurst, King and Frazier are especially excruciating. Senators Burke's and Holt's aren't quite so agonizing, because Burke and Holt are wished out of the picture at the end of only one term each. They still can get back into unofficial life and start over again.

Senators Ashurst, King and Frazier, however, are old timers. They've been in Washington so long that it doesn't seem as if they ever could re-establish themselves in any other environment.

Senator Ashurst is just ending his twenty-eighth year on Capitol Hill. In point of service he's the oldest living senator, excepting only Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina. Senator King is ending his twenty-fourth year; Senator Frazier his eighteenth.

Senator Ashurst doesn't appear jovial over his defeat. He explains how glad he'll be to get back to Arizona, but it's a good deal like the good cheer of a dying man who's glad he's going to heaven.

Senators King and Frazier don't say anything whatever.

Senators Burke and Holt are bellicose; not resigned, as Senator Ashurst is. Apparently they're figuring on staging come-backs later. Well, they're comparative youngsters. Maybe they can do it.

All Democrats but One

Out of the quintet Senator Frazier is the lone Republican. The fact is, he's resembled a Farmer-Laborite or a Progressive rather than a Republican. And a genuinely Republican trend has been noticeable in that bunch of states lately. It will be remembered that Senator Henrik Shipstead recently flopped out of the Farmer-Labor party into Republicanism in Minnesota. And Republicans cast more votes in the last Wisconsin primary than the combined Progressives and Democrats. Possibly Senator Frazier wasn't a sufficiently emphatic Republican to suit his erstwhile G.O.P. following.

Senators Ashurst, King, Burke and Holt have been, more or less, anti-New Deal Democrats. Senators Burke and Holt have been very much so. Senator King hasn't been so vociferous about it, but he's been a consistent "anti" also. Senator Ashurst hasn't been an all-around "anti," but he's fought certain New Deal policies, such as supreme court reorganization and conscription.

Did this quartet's anti-New Dealerishness have anything to do with their defeats for renomination? Only their home state Democratic primary voters know, but at least it's a coincidence that they all were anti-New Dealerish and that all of 'em failed of renomination.

This question, too, arises:

Will the candidates who beat Senators Ashurst, King, Burke and Holt in the primaries, win on election day? Or will the Republicans snow 'em under?

If the Republicans do, it will be a sort of vindication for Senator Ashurst and Co., but that's all the good it will do 'em. And, perchance, it won't happen.

Industry Needs Fair Play

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

When the American industrial machine begins to roll on a mass production basis in behalf of national defense, few doubt that it will show the world something new in military mechanical might. Tanks, airplanes, cannon, armaments of all kinds and varieties, will come off the assembly lines faster than men can be trained to operate them.

However, there are stumbling blocks in the path of industry today that did not exist during World war I. They are not problems of invention and production technique which can be grappled with in laboratory and office. They are the result of too much law-making. Industry is wrapped in red tape as never before. Virtually every operation falls under the alert surveillance of some commission, committee or tax bureau. While departments, costly in the extreme, are maintained by every sizable enterprise solely to compile data required by national and local units of government.

Industry is proceeding with national defense, however, in spite of artificial handicaps. Managements are going ahead with expansion plans running into tens of millions of dollars. In return they are asking cooperation from government to the extent of writing off inevitable losses against taxes in the event that plant expansion programs are unsupported by armament demands.

Every step that can be taken to protect and encourage industry during this critical period should be taken. Political attack for the sake of votes should cease. Bankrupt industries are of no benefit to labor, the public or anyone else. Unproductive industries, crippled by too much red tape, can be disastrous at a time when the national guard is training with "gaspipe" cannon.

Apple Pie Gets Important Place As a Conditioner

By EDWIN C. HILL

It is a long lane that has no turning. Nothing but bad news for years and now the light breaks. The Virginia Institute of Technology discovers that apple pie is loaded with vitamin C. This vitamin is an all-around conditioner. You get nicely hopped up with it. You can lick your weight in wild cats. How's that for a lucky break at a time when national defense is choked in bottle-necks and snarled in red tape? A slap at apple pie might make a nice national emblem—as good, you might think, as a bald eagle.

Edwin C. Hill

First off, it is a symbol of unity with the functional equality of the upper and lower crusts with their weight and substance in a substantial middle section. It stems from New England, fount of our liberties and inseparable from an association of sturdy, early-day American virtues. It is linked in history with the perambulating Johnny Appleseed, who teamed apple trees and democratic ideas and spread them everywhere along the newly blazed trails into the wilderness. Old Walt Whitman had two consuming passions—democracy and apple pie.

Merely Forerunners

The word "pie" stems from the Gaelic "pighe", but the tarts and turnovers of Ireland and England were merely the forerunners of our masterpiece. It is uniquely and distinctly American. Washington Irving hymned apple pie in his "Sketch Book." In New England, particularly, there has long been a cult of patriotic apple piety. Is it possible that there is cryptic meaning in the scientists' current revelation that it is a good physical conditioner.

Less cryptic and good news, too, is the report of national guard medical officers that the lads now qualifying for medical service are just as good as their dads in physical fitness. Considering that it comes after ten lean years is an impressive finding. It is quite a set-back for the croakers who have been figuring this younger generation as softies. There have been only five per cent of rejections and these were due mainly to defects of feet or teeth. Legs get a higher rating than ever before. Vital organs are fine. Even older men are getting a higher physical rating than those of comparable age in 1917.

Sting Taken Out

And here's even more good news. The sting has been taken out of the first World war discovery that our average American mental age was slightly over thirteen years. The intervening decades have brought drastic modifications of intelligence classifications, and leading psychologists now agree that there is no absolute of intelligence such as the age classification might suggest, and that our showing in 1917 might have been a lot worse. They also agree that no matter what a lad's score in the field of what we ordinarily call literacy, he may nevertheless possess great resourcefulness and be gifted with a fine "survival intelligence."

Years ago I knew a bucko old gentleman who could always be found at one of the better bars drinking hard liquor for hours at a stretch. It never seemed to have the slightest effect on him. His eyes and his speech remained clear and he stood firmly on his feet, no matter how long the drinking about lasted. He was about 75 years old and known as "The Colonel", although I never learned whether this was a military or a courtesy title.

Morning Exercise

There wasn't an ounce of fat on him, and his muscles were as hard as nails. He never started his drinking until mid-afternoon. One day I asked him what he did in the mornings. He said he took an early horseback ride, then spent a half hour with the punching bag and wound up with a gymnasium workout with a sparring partner and a massage.

"Why all that?" I asked.

"It is absolutely necessary to enable me to keep up with drinking," he replied.

Nietzsche said "strong men digest their sins." Roger Babson says that in this era of rapid change we will have to be hard-boiled and condition ourselves to physical effort. But, providentially, it would seem, even sedentary citizens may now eat apple pie.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Trend toward Willkie Is Now Unmistakable

AS the campaign for the presidency enters its final month an unmistakable trend toward Wendell Willkie has set in. The major campaign strategy of the Republican candidate and his managers thus appears to be succeeding.

In June Willkie sentiment reached a peak that caused nothing short of dismay in the ranks of the New Dealers and worried the Republican candidate's advisers. It was felt by the latter that there was danger of a mushroom boom that might not endure until election day. The candidate practically withdrew from the spotlight for a time to permit his support to become consolidated on a secure foundation.

It was decided to give the campaign everything the candidate and his party, plus the anti-third term Democrats, had in the final month to inflate the Willkie boom on the eve of the election.

It is evident that this strategy is being applied now and the temporarily enthusiastic third termers are again beginning to worry.

Willkie's style of face-to-face campaigning is getting results and now promises to have his opponent hanging on the ropes when the bell rings. Mr. Roosevelt, of course, would not be able to conduct a campaign as strenuous as that upon which Mr. Willkie is thriving—and, anyway, he has said that he is not thinking of politics.

But there appears to be an astounding number of defense projects, located in districts where votes hang heaviest, that require inspection just at this time. Unless Mr. Roosevelt holds himself in, his role of inspector general of defense is likely to prove almost as arduous as would a campaign for the presidency.

Mr. Willkie is striking telling blows at Mr. Roosevelt's record in office since 1933. Fiscal incompetence, deficits, fifty billion dollar debt, soaring taxes, unpreparedness, experimentation—all are being effectively attacked by the Republican candidate. It is daily becoming plainer that the American way of life would be seriously endangered by four more years of Roosevelt.

The New Deal rebuttal to all of this to date consists of a few eggs hurled at Mr. Willkie by New Dealers in the Michigan sit down sector, where lawlessness unparalleled in the history of the nation was indulged in three years ago, while the man in the White House not only did nothing to stop it but conferred daily over the telephone with the state's New Deal governor, the final result being that a Munich pact was forced upon the forces of law and order.

For his part in forcing industry to surrender to lawlessness, Governor Murphy was rewarded by President Roosevelt with a perch on the Supreme Court of the United States, a post for which he is obviously unfitted.

The attention of the nation is being directed to the Roosevelt record by Mr. Willkie, and it is a record that is seen to be shoddy indeed when exposed to the light.

Mr. Byron an Opponent Of the Hatch Measures

NOT MANY PERSONS interested in clean government will dispute the statement that the two Hatch laws, the first enacted in July, 1939, and the second a year later, represents one of the greatest steps ever taken by this government to divorce pernicious political activities from governmental affairs.

These laws prohibit such activity by government employes and by state workers paid wholly or in part with federal funds. They should serve to stop the disgraceful coercion of WPA and other relief workers, giving them the opportunity to express their own convictions on government. The acts also limit campaign contributions and total expenditures in elections.

Yet, if Representative William D. Byron, of the Sixth Maryland district—the Western Maryland ballwick—would have his way, the Hatch laws would never have been enacted. Mr. Byron is against any such purification of political practices.

Mr. Byron does not do much voting in the House of Representatives, as the record has shown, although theoretically he was sent to Washington for that very purpose. Usually he manages to be away somewhere when important decisions are made on legislation. Mr. Byron probably holds a record for absenteeism. Just whether it is his social or business duties or whether it is indicative of his convictions one is left to guess, but if he were sufficiently interested about important measures, it is to be presumed that he would be on hand when the voting as well as the debating takes place. Frequently he is paired. On other occasions he just doesn't vote. But usually he is somewhere else.

Such was the case when the two important Hatch measures came up for decision in the House of Representatives. He was not on the floor of the House when the first Hatch act came to a vote, but he is entitled to credit for having indicated his opposition by being paired against it. Then, when the extension of the act was voted upon, Mr. Byron's voice was not heard. The record lists him then as "not voting."

Hence, while being absent or not voting in these instances, he is nevertheless on record as being in opposition to these meritorious measures.

If Walter P. Johnson, or even if Charley Stewart, had been a member of the House when those votes were taken, the Western Maryland district would have had its approval voiced in behalf of these Hatch bills.

Johnson, the present Republican nominee, can be depended upon to be on hand in the House when important measures are up for consideration and the votes are taken. He is a man of the people and his time will not be preoccupied with social, business or other activities to such an extent as virtually to put the Western Maryland district without representation in the House, which has unfortunately been the case most of the time during Byron's tenure.

A Legendary Street Now Piker Stuff

THE ANCIENT SOAP-BOX PRACTICE of slam-banging "Wall Street" has been resorted to by Henry A. Wallace, the hand-picked New Deal nominee for vice president. By "Wall Street" is meant by the soap-boxers a group of selfish, powerful and wealthy individuals who are sitting back smugly and pulling the strings that run the country, although as a matter of fact the designation is merely that of the chief financial center of the country and includes as well the doings of "Main Street" through natural agency.

Even so, the former bugaboo of Wall Street is pretty much of a dead horse today. An editorial writer in the Cincinnati Times-Star describes its present status. "The street today," he says, "is a lane of half-empty office buildings. Its denizens, like the occupants of thousands of brokers' offices throughout the land, spend most of their time waiting for customers' calls, playing solitaire, talking over old times with dwindling office forces or wondering where next month's rent is coming from. To these unhappy men, the notion that Wall Street is a great financial octopus whose tenacles reach into every political office in the country is a subject for sardonic laughter."

For those who perchance wish to know where the real center of financial power now exists in the United States, the Times-Star writer supplies the information. It is, he explains, a building on Pennsylvania avenue in Washington called the United States treasury, and "compared to the operations, financial and political, of that institution, Wall Street is piker stuff and always was."

The pertinent suggestion is made that Mr. Wallace, with his experience in dispensing billions to farmers, ought to know that. He should, indeed.

It was to let him devote himself to architectural jobs running into millions, that the Democratic National Committee kindly accepted the resignation of L. W. (Blue Chip) Robert.

Pity the school book publishers whose latest geographies, by the time they reach the pupils, prove nothing more than history books.

The colored tack formerly signifying the late Trotsky among trouble areas on the world may has been duly shifted to the Orient.

By MARSHALL MASLIN

If you pick up "The Family" which is the novel which won the Little Brown Company's $10,000 prize for Nina Fedorova, and glance through it only casually in an effort to catch the feeling of the book, the turn of phrase, the rhythm of the writing, you will probably set the book down in about five minutes and say: "I don't see how this book ever won that contest!" And your judgment will be precisely correct.

Marshall Maslin

Here is a novel that is, from the Browser's point of view toward writing, very badly written, without distinction of style. It is stodgy and prosaic to the flitting eye and few readers would give it a fair chance if they didn't know it for a prize-winner and therefore, supposedly, a book of sound worth. Which is exactly what it is. More than that, it is distinguished, written by a woman of noble passions and understanding. Tolstoi would have read it with sympathy and admiration and understood its compassion and decency.

The book is rich in character and in characters—and the Browser is grateful to Madame Fedorova for writing a story in which sorrow and humor are so humanly interwoven.

Have you a chess player in your family? If so, the Browser suggests that you give him Sturges M. Schley's mystery story, "Who'd Shoot a Genius?" (Random) this Christmas. It will keep him away from the chess table for a few hours, at any rate . . . and it is one of the most civilized mystery stories the Browser has ever read. Witty, subtle, delightful it has only the one fault that it cannot possibly be as appreciated by non-chess players as by those strange folk who rush through their meals to get at the chessmen.

Quentin Toby is a doctor, whose business is straightening out the quirks in the human mind. To his office comes a lovely lady whose husband had been violently killed some months before. He was a famous author, brutal to her, and she had no grief over his taking-off. However, everybody had accepted his death as suicide. She was sure he had been murdered and she wanted his death to be a murder because that would mean $50,000 of insurance money for her.

So Toby, who is no detective, sets out to prove the man was murdered, find the murderer, and collect the $50,000. A delightful story, with many charming individuals, male and female, in it—and a surprising solution (which the Browser wouldn't dream of revealing to you).

A greater mystery than anyone you will find in any conventional "mystery story" is the theme of Maurice Samuel's "The Great Hatred" (Knopf)—which Pierre Van Paasen describes as "the most comprehensive, forceful and uncompromising work on the fundamental thesis of anti-Semitism."

Maurice Samuel was born in Roumania, educated at the University of Manchester. He came to this country in 1914 and hoboed through the Middle West. He worked in a tire factory, served two years in the army and was an interpreter at the 1919 peace conference. Since then he has written ten books and has lived nearly ten years in Palestine. He has no shallow or conventional approach to the problem of anti-Semitism and he spares neither Christian nor Jew in his analysis or his conclusions. He is profoundly, not merely cleverly, original and he feels very deeply that "The Great Hatred" of the Jews is a symptom of the world's drive toward self-destruction.

"Anti-Semitism is much more important than the Jew", he believes, "its ravages only begin with the Jewish people. A world in which anti-Semitism has triumphed will be a hell for the surviving Jews; it will also be a hell for every human being in whom a spark of moral principle has survived."

NOTE: The Viking Press announces that on September 20th, when it published St. Clair McKelway's "Gossip: The Life and Times of Walter Winchell"—Mr. McKelway took a plane from Lima, Peru, and flew still further south toward the Straits of Magellan (and away from Mr. Winchell). . . . Enough from Marsh Maslin.

Hinckley Defends Training Program For Civilian Pilots

Editor Cumberland News:

Gen. Hugh Johnson recently delivered himself of a severe attack upon the CAA Civilian Pilot Training program. In general it consisted of papaphrasing an earlier and more severe attack in an aviation trade magazine, "American Aviation," by its editor, Wayne W. Parrish. In fact, Gen. Johnson gave Mr. Parrish as authority for several of his statements.

Gen. Johnson, in his column, made numerous serious misstatements. He said the program is "a plan to train 50,000 pilots for military and naval service." This is simply not true. It is a plan to train civilian pilots, in varying degrees, as a reservoir from which the armed forces can draw pilot material.

It is the hope that the more advanced of these students—graduates of the secondary course—can be trained by the armed forces into military pilots in a considerably shorter time than without this training.

Valuable as Feeder

Gen. Johnson says "no military or naval authority is very clearly on record" on this point. If he had taken one glance at the printed record of the appropriation hearings for this program, held on May 29, 1940, he could have learned that both Brig. Gen. Jacob Fickel, assistant chief of the army air corps, and Capt. George D. Murray, of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, testified clearly their belief that the program would be a valuable "feeder" to the military services. They testified in considerable detail, for anyone to read who was interested in the facts.

Gen. Johnson calls the pilot-training program "a slapped-together hay crate organization of civilian pilots," and doubts that "a safe and uniform course of instruction can be given." He says the program is "not properly supervised" and "dangerous."

A little casual reading in the aviation field would have shown Gen. Johnson that his informant, Wayne Parrish, stands alone among aviation publishers in his bitter attitude toward the pilot-training program. Surely this would suggest a bug under the chip, somewhere, to any fair-minded person.

The Safety Angle

As to the safety and efficiency of the program, here is part of a telegram sent September 20 by William Brinckerhoff, New York aviation insurance specialist:

"As one vitally interested in insurance and safety aspects of pilot training program since origin I am amazed at editorial last issue 'American Aviation.' Before program began student accident insurance cost $30 per $1,000, whereas program has produced such continuously good safety record as to have enjoyed reductions in cost each session including 10 per cent for fall (1940) session giving $3,000 death benefit, $500 hospitalization for only $9 compared best available cost of $20 for students outside program. Surely accidents not concealed from insurance companies who would be called on to pay death or hospital claims, and surely rates would not be reduced in face of any such record as 'American Aviation' indicates . . . Problems can be solved if uniformed critics do not sabotage this vital defense project. Keep up good work."

Praised as Miracle

General Johnson did not state—and may not know—that his informant, Wayne Parrish, wrote high praise of this program only three months ago, on July 1, 1940, calling its safety record "a Twentieth century miracle," describing it as "so far beyond anything previously established for flight training as to be in a different mathematical world," and praising the letting of the training to private flying firms "instead of creating a vast bureaucracy." This, now, General Johnson calls "a slapped-together hay crate organization."

The magazine "Sportsman Pilot" said on August 15: "The instruction is so superior to training available before the program was launched that comparisons are futile." It added "the entire training . . . is executed in a scientific and controlled manner."

"Aviation" magazine said in April: "The CAA flight training program has brought other benefits . . . Insurance rates are down to new lows . . . Airports are better . . . Flight instruction is definitely better . . . Airplanes are also better."

"National Aeronautics" magazine said in July: "... So thorough has been the training under this program that the first graduates are 'far above' the average of civilians of equal flight experience trained by usual methods of instruction."

The Washington Star said in September: "It is encouraging to note that in spite of great expansion and speeding up of the civil program, safety standards higher than any ever before known in civilian pilot training are being maintained."

The "slapped-together hay crate organization" at which Gen. Johnson sneers consists of the heads of about 700 commercial flying-schools from coast to coast. Many of these men helped pioneer this industry, and they are the backbone of private flying in the United States today.

In this training program they are setting records surpassing anything the country ever saw before, and nearly all the interested commentators seem to know it except Mr. Parrish and Gen. Johnson.

ROBERT H. HINCKLEY,
Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

From the time the defense program was launched, it has been the fashion in New Deal circles to take pot shots at business. Every delay in getting defense orders moving has been attributed to the selfishness of industrial leaders. Business men were under fire throughout the debate on war profits taxation and industrial conscription.

But what are the facts? Here they are, from a man who above all others ought to know—William S. Knudsen, of the National Defense Advisory Commission:

"Every so often some statement comes out implying that manufacturers are holding back and not cooperating. In the four months I have been in Washington, I have talked to a lot of manufacturers, large and small, and I have still to find one who is not willing to do everything he could to help the program, even to the extent of turning his design of motor over to someone else to make because he could not handle the large quantity himself."

That attitude always has been true of American business. But it seems to be an inseparable part of the New Deal program to smear business at every opportunity.

Morning Motto

Courage is, on all hands, considered an essential of high character—FROUDE.

Industry Needs Fair Play

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

When the American industrial machine begins to roll on a mass production basis in behalf of national defense, few doubt that it will show the world something new in military mechanical might. Tanks, airplanes, cannon, armaments of all kinds and varieties will come off the assembly lines faster than men can be trained to operate them.

However, there are stumbling blocks in the path of industry today that did not exist during World war I. They are not problems of invention and production technique which can be grappled with in laboratory and office. They are the result of too much law-making. Industry is wrapped in red tape as never before. Virtually every operation falls under the alert surveillance of some commission, committee or tax bureau. While departments, costly in the extreme, are maintained by every sizable enterprise solely to compile data required by national and local units of government.

Industry is proceeding with national defense, however, in spite of artificial handicaps. Managements are going ahead with expansion plans running into tens of millions of dollars. In return they are asking cooperation from government to the extent of writing off inevitable losses against taxes in the event that plant expansion programs are unsupported by armament demands.

Every step that can be taken to protect and encourage industry during this critical period should be taken. Political attack for the sake of votes should cease. Bankrupt industries are of no benefit to labor, the public or anyone else. Unproductive industries, crippled by too much red tape, can be disastrous at a time when the national guard is training with "gaspipe" cannon.

Apple Pie Gets Important Place As a Conditioner

Edwin C. Hill

It is a long lane that has no turning. Nothing but bad news for years and now the light breaks. The Virginia Institute of Technology discovers that apple pie is loaded with vitamin C. This vitamin is an all-around conditioner. You get nicely hopped up with it. You can lick your weight in wild cats. How's that for a lucky break at a time when national defense is choked in bottle-necks and snarled in red tape? A slap at apple pie might make a nice national emblem—as good, you might think, as a bald eagle.

First off, it is a symbol of unity with the functional equality of the upper and lower crusts with the weight and substance in a substantial middle section. It stems from New England, fount of our liberties and inseparable from an association of sturdy, early-day American virtues. It is linked in history with the perambulating Johnny Appleseed, who teamed apple trees and democratic ideas and spread them everywhere along the newly blazed trails into the wilderness. Old Walt Whitman had two consuming passions—democracy and apple pie.

Merely Forerunners

The word "pie" stems from the Gaelic "pighe", but the tarts and turnovers of Ireland and England were merely the forerunners of our masterpiece. It is uniquely and distinctly American. Washington Irving hymned apple pie in his "Sketch Book." In New England, particularly, there has long been a strain of patriotic apple piety. Is it possible that there is cryptic meaning in the scientists' current revelation that it is a good physical conditioner.

Less cryptic and good news, too, is the report of national guard medical officers that the lads now qualifying for medical service are just as good as their dads in physical fitness. Considering that it comes after ten lean years it is an impressive finding. It is quite a set-back for the croakers who have been figuring this younger generation as softies. There have been only five per cent of rejections and these were due mainly to defects of feet or teeth. Legs get a higher rating than ever before. Vital organs are fine. Even older men are getting a higher physical rating than those of comparable age in 1917.

And here's even more good news. The sting has been taken out of the first World war discovery that our average American mental age was slightly over thirteen years. The intervening decades have brought drastic modifications of intelligence classifications, and leading psychologists now agree that there is no absolute of intelligence such as the age classification might suggest, and that our showing of 1917 might have been a lot worse. They also agree that no matter what a lad's score in the field of what we ordinarily call literacy he may nevertheless possess great resourcefulness and be gifted with a fine "survival intelligence."

Years ago I knew a bucko old gentleman who could always be found at one of the better bars drinking hard liquor for hours at a stretch. It never seemed to have the slightest effect on him. His eyes and his speech remained clear and he stood firmly on his feet, no matter how long the drinking bout lasted. He was about 75 years old and known as "The Colonel", although I never learned whether this was a military or a courtesy title.

Morning Exercise

There wasn't an ounce of fat on him, and his muscles were as hard as nails. He never started his drinking until mid-afternoon. One day I asked him what he did in the mornings. He said he took an early horseback ride, then spent a half hour with the punching bag and wound up with a gymnasium workout with a sparring partner and a massage.

"Why all that?" I asked.

"It is absolutely necessary to enable me to keep up with drinking," he replied.

Nietzsche said "strong men digest their sins." Roger Babson says that in this era of rapid change we will have to be hard-boiled and condition ourselves to physical effort. But, providentaly, it would seem, even sedentary citizens may now eat apple pie.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Quotable Quotes

By Wendell L. Willkie

Every hat that I see, every coat if any, that I see, is simply saturated with Federal taxes. The rich always take care of themselves. That's one reason why they're rich. If you think that John D. Rockefeller and J. P. Morgan are paying all these hidden taxes, you are a bigger sucker than ever came out of Indiana.

FATAL INSTINCT

By KAY COHEN

"It's an open and shut case, Duffy," Captain Shanahan decided, throwing down the file of papers the detective had accumulated on the murder, or alleged murder, of a little jeweler named Blondin, down on Third street. "I guess I don't have to write down in black and white the proper procedure for you to follow!"

Detective Ambrose Duffy's thick neck, bulging above his clean collar, reddened at the implied rebuke. He knitted his brows together stubbornly and retrieved the file from the captain's desk.

"I can't just walk down and arrest Gus Schroeder on a murder rap, Chief!" he complained earnestly. "What if I did turn up a lot of evidence that applies to him? He can establish a perfect alibi!"

"I've been expecting you."

"We've got all the evidence we need, Duffy!" Shanahan snapped "The man on beat finds Blondin's store door open at 4 a. m. He walks in, finds Blondin sprawled out on the floor of the living quarters behind the store. There's a heavy poker lying on his head, the poker the job was done with!"

Duffy sighed miserably.

"Yeh, chief, but there were no prints on anything in the store, including the poker — nothing we could pin on Schroeder. I hate to use circumstantial evidence to convict a man."

"Scram on down and pick up Schroeder!" Shanahan commanded shortly. "We know that Blondin and Schroeder quarreled before about this girl Helena Blackett. We know she's wearing a big solitaire that doesn't show up as being sold on Blondin's register records. Who stole it and gave it to the girl . . . Blondin?"

He left his car outside the station and walked the few blocks over to 8th street, where Schroeder lived. The young man was a mechanic, living in a fairly respectable boarding house and keeping his nose clean. He had a good alibi, anyway!

The papers had played the murder up for a day or two and dropped it for some other sensational business, like they always did except when there was someone famous or rich mixed up in it.

He found Schroeder sitting on the clean bed of his room, not fidgeting or chain-smoking, just sitting there doing nothing but thinking. He hated to break it up, but he had to.

"I got a warrant for you, son!" he said quietly, ready for trouble but not really expecting it, Schroeder grinned sourly.

"I've been expecting you," he answered, getting up and putting on his coat. He shrugged. "Here goes my job, and my chances of getting married to Helena! This publicity will kill them cold!" He held out his hand and shoved a clipping at Duffy. "Here, this clipping says the laboratory at headquarters found that a left-handed person did the job! I'm not left-handed!"

Duffy was cynical. "How do I know you're not smart enough to have done it left handed, just to support that perfect alibi you had so pat?" The young man shrugged again and his forehead wrinkled. They went on down to headquarters.

By the time that Schroeder had been in jail a week, waiting developments, Detective Duffy had thought out many things. He made it a point to check over all of Schroeder's friends, the girl's associations, the jeweler's connections. The girl firmly maintained that the solitaire had come by mail without any note or name in the package, and that she had tossed out the wrapping. She didn't know who sent it.

Duffy ran across a slight clue in the person of Herb Talcott, who had been taking Helena home from a church meeting on Saturday nights recently because Schroeder had to work late that night. It was very slim, but he decided to use Talcott to break down the other young man's story if possible. So on Monday morning, Duffy had Talcott at the station and had the turnkey bring Schroeder up from the downstairs lockup.

"I guess you two boys know each other, seeing as you both know Helena Blackett," Duffy put in, just to see what effect it would have. The two looked impersonally at each other, that was all. He led them into the captain's room, where a microscope stood on a desk.

"There's nothing to get excited about, boys," he said amiably. "I'm just sort of bending over backward to keep both you youngsters out of trouble . . . if you're innocent. I got a lad of my own about your age!" He pulled a handkerchief from his pocket and wiped his palms. "I want each of you to look into that microscope and tell me what you see!"

Schroeder looked puzzled, twisted the adjustment on the microscope and looked. Talcott bent over and looked in his turn. Both disclaimed recognizing what was on the slide. Duffy shook hands with them both and let Talcott go, having Schroeder taken back to his cell. Then he went into the captain's office again.

"You can have the boys pick up Talcott on his way out, chief," he grinned. He's your man! Motivation of jealousy, greed, capability and inclination—even if he has an airtight alibi, too!"

Capt. Shanahan looked skeptical. "Out with it! What shenanigans have you been up to now?" he demanded.

Ambrose Duffy blushed a little. "The murder was left-handed, wasn't he?" he queried. "I got the laboratory to tell me about left-handed people, and how they are one-sided in other things besides their hands!"

"Meaning what, Sherlock Holmes?"

"I watched them both in there very carefully. They both shook hands with me with their right hands, I noticed." He countered. "Only Talcott kicked a handkerchief I dropped on the floor out of his way . . . with his left foot! And he looks through the eyepiece of the contraption . . . with his left eye! I think we'll have a long talk with that young feller!"—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

NEXT MORNING Gun was about soon after sunrise, and from then on was as restive as a cat on hot bricks. He wandered around the bungalow, constantly staring over at the wooden fence, and straining his ears to catch any sound. What was happening behind that fence—or what HAD happened? Had Coral been discovered trying to pursue her unnecessary investigations? If so . . .

Gun shuddered at the thought. He realized the position between Coral and Otto, and knew pretty well how the latter would behave if he found she was double-crossing him. It was not a pleasant reflection, apart from its repercussions upon his own escape.

He ate hardly any breakfast—which was a normal one according to the standards existing before Trent started his "persuasion." Tommy, on the other hand, ate heartily and was full of optimism.

Gun's restlessness and anxiety lasted until about noon, and then, to his immense relief, he saw a slender figure, with flame colored hair, emerge from the small gate in the wooden fence and begin to cross the open space in the direction of the bungalow. She was smoking a cigaret, and walked with a swaggering gait. Plainly all was well with her.

Gun heaved a sigh of relief, and went in to pour himself out a stiff whiskey to steady the reaction on his already overstained nerves.

When he looked again she was chatting gaily with the guard at the gate. Finally she gave him a cigaret, and showed him a slip of paper. Whereupon he laughed, shrugged, and unlocked the gate to let her in.

Tommy was around at the back of the bungalow, basking in the sunshine. Gun decided to intercept her. He emerged from the door, his attitude languid and indifferent. Apparently seeing Coral for the first time, he went to meet her, but with no more apparent eagerness than ordinary politeness demanded.

"Good morning," he greeted her. Then, quickly: "Just stroll around the corner with me—this way. I want to talk to you, but I don't want Hazeldeane to hear."

They strolled around the side of the bungalow until they were hidden both from Tommy and from any possible other watcher—they were between the bungalow and the steep slope of the overhanging hill.

"Frankly, Miss Coral, I'm every kind of fool," Gun confessed. "I should have realized last night that you were speaking the truth—I did later, as a matter of fact."

"So I realized from your remark about identities," she smiled at him.

"You must forgive me," Gun went on, eagerly. "The rather drastic method adopted by our friend Trent has rather got on my nerves. But tell me—does X know where you are?"

"No. I don't know where I am myself. Before we left I only knew that I was coming to the headquarters of the gang—or one of their headquarters, anyway. They have another at Chenham, in Kent, and another in the south of France, not far from Cannes."

"The devil they have," said Gun. "I knew something of the first one, but not the second."

"We must go around and find your friend," Coral said, anxiously. "We can have a talk then, but very soon I must get Mr. Hazeldeane into the bungalow, and work my wicked wiles on him. We shall have to stage it, because you're quite right—there are hidden microphones in both the bedroom and the sitting room, and they can listen in over there to everything that's said. And they mustn't suspect I'm not on the level or . . . well . . . just or . . ."

Gun agreed. "But there's just one thing I must tell you before we join Tommy. I don't want him to know, because he's such an impetuous, quick-tempered blighter that he might give the whole show away."

"Quickly, then—what is it?"

"Just this. There's no need for you to investigate any further as to what these beauties are up to. I managed to have an hour with Trent's keys and his desk, and found out the whole thing—or all the main essentials, anyway."

"Did you, though!" She looked at him with some admiration. "That was pretty clever of you. How did you do it?"

"That's keep," answered Gun. "The main point is that I know their little game now. It means that we've got to get away from here, and very soon, if we're to prevent such destruction and loss of life, it gives one cold shivers to think about it. We mustn't worry about anything else at the moment, but just how to get away."

"And that won't be easy," commented the girl. "Have you got any sort of plan?"

"Yes, a rough one. But we can discuss it later. I want to tell you what this scheme of your friends over there really amounts to. Have you any idea?"

"Only the vaguest. I gather there's going to be a b_ holdup, and someone's likely to get hurt in the process. They've a regular arsenal over there, with enough stock in it to blow up a village."

"It's more than a village they intend to blow up," Gun interrupted, grimly. "Listen—here's the scheme in a nutshell. There seem to be three parties concerned. Firstly, some immensely wealthy men who are financing the scheme. Secondly, a group of financiers who can work the stock market."

"Ah," she interrupted. "That's where Watson comes in."

"No doubt!" Gun's voice was grimmer than ever. "And the third group are the practical men—the men who are to do the dirty work. Your friend Otto seems to be in charge of that section. And the idea is, in a sense, a very simple one. On a certain day—or, more likely, night—an airplane will fly over London. Simultaneously—or as nearly so as possible—another one will appear over Berlin. Each of these machines will drop three or four bombs on the busiest part of the city—incidentally wrecking buildings and killing and maiming heavens knows how many people."

"Good heavens!" Coral had gone pale, and stared at Gun with startled eyes. "But WHY—what's the object?"

"Only this. Immediately after the bombing, in both London and Berlin, an intensive propaganda scheme will be put into operation. It will be rumored that the machine that bombed Berlin was a British one, and that the one that bombed London was an Italian one. Thus the temper of the population of both countries will be roused to fever pitch. There will be instant danger of war—a danger that may well become fact—and in consequence there will be a panic on the stock exchanges of three countries—England, Germany and Italy. And to men who can control the markets, and who know beforehand what is going to happen, it will be easy to make an enormous fortune."

"Good heavens!" Coral gasped again. Even she was overcome with the enormity of the scheme.

"It's due to come off on the 25th at the latest," Gun went on. "And we are the only ones outside the gang who know it—and, somehow, we've got to stop it. That means we've got to move at once, and move quickly. And now we'd better join Tommy Hazeldeane, and put our heads together before you stage your show in the bungalow. But remember, not a word to him about the real game our friends are playing, or he may easily ruin us completely."

Chatting lightly, as though neither of them had a care in the world, they strolled around the bungalow and on to the lawn.

"We must hurry up," Coral said anxiously. "If I don't get to work vamping Mr. Hazeldeane here soon, they'll be suspecting something."

"All right," said Gun. "Now look here. You've had a chance to look around the place a bit, I take it. Where do you think we are?"

"On some obscure island of the Greek archipelago."

"I thought as much. You've located their arsenal, haven't you? Got any idea where the keys are kept?"

"Yes, I've found that out. Trent keeps them."

"Good. Think you might be able to get hold of them?"

"I can try, anyway."

"It's important. If we can manage that, we can put a spoke in their wheel that will shake the whole damned vehicle. Now, how many men do you think there are on the island?"

"I don't think—I know. Thirty-one—including Oscar and the pilot who brought us over."

"You're thorough—I'll say that for you. What have they got tucked away behind that wooden fence, exactly?"

"Living quarters. Two workshops. A laboratory where they've been making up their explosives. And a few nondescript sheds."

"Where's the arsenal, then?"

"Right away from the rest—they're not taking any chances. It's in a sort of cave, dug into the hillside, there."

"A good idea. Do they keep a sentry there?"

"Day and night, I gather."

"Ah! But it can be dealt with—if we're lucky. What sort of fellows have they got nere—the men, I mean?"

"A pretty tough gang—the sort that wouldn't stop at much if they were out for trouble.

"But what nationalities?"

"German, Italian, Spanish mostly. A few English and Americans. And two Japs."

"H'm! Cosmopolitan."

"Yes. And tough, as I said. But they all seem to love me, which is an advantage."

"Shows there's sense among them as well as variety. And now, hurry up—I'm getting worried about what they'll think over there."

"All right. Take your young man into the bungalow now, and do your stuff. Tommy, you'll have to seem to be weakening, but you mustn't give in yet. Let 'Hope for tomorrow' be the motto. We must play them, for the moment, as the angler plays his fish—only they mustn't see the hook, or feel the line. Now, off you go—and while you're in there I'll see if I can work out some sort of a plan. Thank heavens we've plenty of cigarets."

The other two rose and went into the bungalow, and for the best part of an hour Gun sprawled on the grass, smoking cigaret after cigaret, and seeking for the best and safest plan of escape.

When the others joined him he glanced up at them with a grin.

"Well, how did you get on?"

Tommy chuckled—Coral looked a little flushed.

"Oh, fine! I'm almost eating out of her hand, but not quite. Latterly I was trying to persuade her to help me to escape and to run away with her—leaving you here to stand the racket."

"Dirty dog!" Gun grinned.

"Only she won't agree until I tell her all about the invention. She wants to get the dough first, and then make our getaway."

"Gold digger!" Gun laughed. "But that's stuff. I'll bet they're laughing like the devil over there."

Coral made a face.

"I doubt if Otto is, for one. He's so beastly jealous!"

Gun laughed again.

"He must realize that one can't make omelets without breaking eggs."

"Time's getting on," said Coral. "What about that plan?"

Gun suddenly became grave again.

"Here's the general idea, anyway. We'd better fix it for tomorrow night—and I'm afraid most of the work falls on to your shoulders—for the first part, at any rate."

"I can stand that."

"In the first place, you must get the key of the arsenal, somehow. Then you'll have to get the key of this infernal gate from the guard outside—again somehow. I'll admit I can't see how. Then you let us out. We make a dive straight for the arsenal. We must get hold of a supply of those G.13 pears—the effect is not to kill, but to render unconscious for a considerable time. Then we'll get to windward, rouse the show, and gas them when they come at us. After that we'll blow up the arsenal."

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

NEXT MORNING Gun was about soon after sunrise, and from then on was as restive as a cat on hot bricks. He wandered around the bungalow, constantly staring over at the wooden fence, and straining his ears to catch any sound. What was happening behind that fence—or what HAD happened? Had Coral been discovered trying to pursue her unnecessary investigations? If so . . .

Gun shuddered at the thought. He realized the position between Coral and Otto, and knew pretty well how the latter would behave if he found she was double-crossing him. It was not a pleasant reflection, apart from its repercussions upon his own escape.

He ate hardly any breakfast—which was a normal one according to the standards existing before Trent started his "persuasion." Tommy, on the other hand, ate heartily and was full of optimism.

Gun's restlessness and anxiety lasted until about noon, and then, to his immense relief, he saw a slender figure, with flame colored hair, emerge from the small gate in the wooden fence and begin to cross the open space in the direction of the bungalow. She was smoking a cigaret, and walked with a swaggering gait. Plainly all was well with her.

Gun heaved a sigh of relief, and went in to pour himself out a stiff whiskey to steady the reaction on his already overstained nerves.

When he looked again she was chatting gaily with the guard at the gate. Finally she gave him a cigaret, and showed him a slip of paper. Whereupon he laughed, shrugged, and unlocked the gate to let her in.

Tommy was around at the back of the bungalow, basking in the sunshine. Gun decided to intercept her. He emerged from the door, his attitude languid and indifferent. Apparently seeing Coral for the first time, he went to meet her, but with no more apparent eagerness than ordinary politeness demanded.

"Good morning," he greeted her. Then, quickly: "Just stroll around the corner with me—this way. I want to talk to you, but I don't want Hazeldeane to hear."

They strolled around the side of the bungalow until they were hidden both from Tommy and from any possible other watcher—they were between the bungalow and the steep slope of the overhanging hill.

"Frankly, Miss Coral, I'm every kind of fool," Gun confessed. "I should have realized last night that you were speaking the truth—I did later, as a matter of fact."

"So I realized from your remark about identities," she smiled at him.

"You must forgive me," Gun went on, eagerly. "The rather drastic method adopted by our friend Trent has rather got on my nerves. But tell me—does X know where you are?"

"No. I don't know where I am myself. Before we left I only knew that I was coming to the headquarters of the gang—or one of their headquarters, anyway. They have another at Chenham, in Kent, and another in the south of France, not far from Cannes."

"The devil they have," said Gun. "I knew something of the first one, but not the second."

"We must go around and find your friend," Coral said, anxiously. "We can have a talk then, but very soon I must get Mr. Hazeldeane into the bungalow, and work my wicked wiles on him. We shall have to stage it, because you're quite right—there are hidden microphones in both the bedroom and the sitting room, and they can listen in over there to everything that's said. And they mustn't suspect I'm not on the level or . . . well . . . just or . . ."

Gun agreed. "But there's just one thing I must tell you before we join Tommy. I don't want him to know, because he's such an impetuous, quick-tempered blighter that he might give the whole show away."

"Quickly, then—what is it?"

"Just this. There's no need for you to investigate any further as to what these beauties are up to. I managed to have an hour with Trent's keys and his desk, and found out the whole thing—or all the main essentials, anyway."

"Did you, though!" She looked at him with some admiration. "That was pretty clever of you. How did you do it?"

"That's keep," answered Gun. "The main point is that I know their little game now. It means that we've got to get away from here, and very soon, if we're to prevent such destruction and loss of life, it gives one cold shivers to think about it. We mustn't worry about anything else at the moment, but just how to get away."

"And that won't be easy," commented the girl. "Have you got any sort of plan?"

"Yes, a rough one. But we can discuss it later. I want to tell you what this scheme of your friends over there really amounts to. Have you any idea?"

"Only the vaguest. I gather there's going to be a b_ holdup, and someone's likely to get hurt in the process. They've a regular arsenal over there, with enough stock in it to blow up a village."

"It's more than a village they intend to blow up," Gun interrupted, grimly. "Listen—here's the scheme in a nutshell. There seem to be three parties concerned. Firstly, some immensely wealthy men who are financing the scheme. Secondly, a group of financiers who can work the stock market."

"Ah," she interrupted. "That's where Watson comes in."

"No doubt!" Gun's voice was grimmer than ever. "And the third group are the practical men—the men who are to do the dirty work. Your friend Otto seems to be in charge of that section. And the idea is, in a sense, a very simple one. On a certain day—or, more likely, night—an airplane will fly over London. Simultaneously—or as nearly so as possible—another one will appear over Berlin. Each of these machines will drop three or four bombs on the busiest part of the city—incidentally wrecking buildings and killing and maiming heavens knows how many people."

"Good heavens!" Coral had gone pale, and stared at Gun with startled eyes. "But WHY—what's the object?"

"Only this. Immediately after the bombing, in both London and Berlin, an intensive propaganda scheme will be put into operation. It will be rumored that the machine that bombed Berlin was a British one, and that the one that bombed London was an Italian one. Thus the temper of the population of both countries will be roused to fever pitch. There will be instant danger of war—a danger that may well become fact—and in consequence there will be a panic on the stock exchanges of three countries—England, Germany and Italy. And to men who can control the markets, and who know beforehand what is going to happen, it will be easy to make an enormous fortune."

"Good heavens!" Coral gasped again. Even she was overcome with the enormity of the scheme.

"It's due to come off on the 25th at the latest," Gun went on. "And we are the only ones outside the gang who know it—and, somehow, we've got to stop it. That means we've got to move at once, and move quickly. And now we'd better join Tommy Hazeldeane, and put our heads together before you stage your show in the bungalow. But remember, not a word to him about the real game our friends are playing, or he may easily ruin us completely."

Chatting lightly, as though neither of them had a care in the world, they strolled around the bungalow and on to the lawn.

"We must hurry up," Coral said anxiously. "If I don't get to work vamping Mr. Hazeldeane here soon, they'll be suspecting something."

"All right," said Gun. "Now look here. You've had a chance to look around the place a bit, I take it. Where do you think we are?"

"On some obscure island of the Greek archipelago."

"I thought as much. You've located their arsenal, haven't you? Got any idea where the keys are kept?"

"Yes, I've found that out. Trent keeps them."

"Good. Think you might be able to get hold of them?"

"I can try, anyway."

"It's important. If we can manage that, we can put a spoke in their wheel that will shake the whole damned vehicle. Now, how many men do you think there are on the island?"

"I don't think—I know. Thirty-one—including Oscar and the pilot who brought us over."

"You're thorough—I'll say that for you. What have they got tucked away behind that wooden fence, exactly?"

"Living quarters. Two workshops. A laboratory where they've been making up their explosives. And a few nondescript sheds."

"Where's the arsenal, then?"

"Right away from the rest—they're not taking any chances. It's in a sort of cave, dug into the hillside, there."

"A good idea. Do they keep a sentry there?"

"Day and night, I gather."

"Ah! But it can be dealt with—if we're lucky. What sort of fellows have they got here—the men, I mean?"

"A pretty tough gang—the sort that wouldn't stop at much if they were out for trouble.

"But what nationalities?"

"H'm! Cosmopolitan."

"Yes. And tough, as I said. But they all seem to love me, which is an advantage."

"Shows there's sense among them as well as variety. And now, hurry up—I'm getting worried about what they'll think over there."

"All right. Take your young man into the bungalow now, and do your stuff, Tommy, you'll have to seem to be weakening, but you mustn't give in yet. Let 'Hope for tomorrow' be the motto. We must play them, for the moment, as the angler plays his fish—only they mustn't see the hook, or feel the line. Now, off you go—and while you're in there I'll see if I can work out some sort of a plan. Thank heavens we've plenty of cigarets."

The other two rose and went into the bungalow, and for the best part of an hour Gun sprawled on the grass, smoking cigaret after cigaret, and seeking for the best and safest plan of escape.

When the others joined him he glanced up at them with a grin.

"Well, how did you get on?"

Tommy chuckled—Coral looked a little flushed.

"Oh, fine! I'm almost eating out of her hand, but not quite. Latterly I was trying to persuade her to help me to escape and to run away with her—leaving you here to stand the racket."

"Dirty dog!" Gun grinned.

"Only she won't agree until I tell her all about the invention. She wants to get the dough first, and then make our getaway."

"Gold digger!" Gun laughed. "But that's stuff. I'll bet they're laughing like the devil over there."

Coral made a face.

"I doubt if Otto is, for one. He's so beastly jealous!"

Gun laughed again.

"He must realize that one can't make omelets without breaking eggs."

"Time's getting on," said Coral. "What about that plan?"

Gun suddenly became grave again.

"Here's the general idea, anyway. We'd better fix it for tomorrow night—and I'm afraid most of the work falls on to your shoulders—for the first part, at any rate."

"I can stand that."

"In the first place, you must get the key of the arsenal, somehow. Then you'll have to get the key of this infernal gate from the guard outside—again somehow. I'll admit I can't see how. Then you let us out. We make a dive straight for the arsenal. We must get hold of a supply of those G.13 pears—the effect is not to kill, but to render unconscious for a considerable time. Then we'll get to windward, rouse the show, and gas them when they come at us. After that we'll blow up the arsenal."

Doctor Talks On Mistakes of Some Teachers

Most Serious Are Those of Simple Basic Items of Teaching

BY GARRY C. MEYERS, Ph.D.

Often when I address teachers, my subject is, "The Tragedy of Errors." I attempt to lead the teachers to see the enormous wate of time and energy of the child and teacher in the making and repeating of mistakes.

The most serious of these errors are with simple basic items which the child will use the rest of his life such as the correct spelling of simple, essential words, and the learning by heart of such basic number facts as 9 and 7 are 16.

When the teacher corrects or grades the test papers of her pupils she is annoyed by the number of mistakes she finds. So is the child as he sees the marks on his returned papers. Rarely does a child leave a question unanswered. Still more rarely will he venture in the classroom to say, "I don't know." He supposes he must always answer right or wrong. But as a matter of fact, it is worse for his learning success to answer wrong than not to answer at all.

Adding Injury

What makes the child's errors so serious is that they don't stay corrected; he makes them over and over again; and the most persistent errors tend to be repeated in exactly the same way. This fact irritates the teacher, or the parent who helps the child at home with his lessons. Accordingly the already worried child may be scolded, even punished.

But if a teacher or parent will weigh the matter calmly he will not let himself grow angry at the child for making and repeating errors. The child does not make mistakes to be ornery. He is discouraged and annoyed at himself on account of them. He just makes them in spite of his wish not to do so—when, for example, he spells onion as u-n-i-o-n, he merely makes the association in this way. Having made it this way once he is the more inclined to make it in the same way again or to spell it in some other way, still incorrect. Psychologically, there is no difference between repeating a wrong answer and repeating a right answer. A mistake once made is likely to be made again.

The main problem in good teaching (of facts) at school or home is to keep the child from making a wrong answer or repeating it; to helping him avoid mistakes.

The child who easily might master without error the spelling of three words or the memorizing of three number facts, at a sitting, might get all mixed up if asked to try to master five or eight of either.

Perhaps the chief reason the average child piles up so many mistakes is because he is supposed to learn more items at a lesson that he will learn accurately.

Always help the child hold fast to what he has already mastered by having him often repeat it mechanically of use it in some sensible way. Good drill is repetition of only what has been learned correctly. Unfortunately, most drill consists of repeating "wrongs" as well as "rights."

Inasmuch as several thousand of my readers recently have written me at 235 East 45th St., N. Y., enclosing a self-addressed envelope in order to receive a sheet of the 100 addition facts and a sheet of the 100 subttraction facts, I fear that some will expect the child to try to learn too many of these at a lesson. Let me entreat parents using these sheets to have the child attack only three or four at a sitting. If the child should attack fifteen or twenty of them at a sitting, the results would be terrible. Please have him study only a few at a time.

W. C. T. U. Seeks To Keep Liquor Away From Army Camps

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 4 (AP) — Delegates to the state convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union urged in a resolution here that the sale of alcoholic beverages in or near military camps be prohibited.

The resolution asserted that "since the training camps will be filled largely with sons of abstaining mothers, the cooperation of all civic and religious bodies is asked" to provide healthful past-time activities and spiritual guidance for conscrnpts soon to be enrolled for a year's training.

Another resolution urged that members, "realizing that repeal of the eighteenth amendment has increased the use of liquor," support an increased program of "forceful education" as to the effects of intoxicants, and also of cigarets.

Radio and billboard advertising of alcohol, and moving pictures depicting the use of intoxicants were condemned and a resolution asking that "drinking scenes" be banished from the movies.

Members of the Resolutions Committee were Miss Helena Stauffer, Walkersville; Mrs. Leonard Burband, Baltimore; Mrs. Grant German and Mrs. Hamilton Fox, Salisbury; and Mrs. Edwin C. Bixler, New Windsor.

Federal civil service employes have been finger-printed since 1930.

Doctor Talks On Mistakes of Some Teachers

BY GARRY C. MEYERS, Ph.D.

Often when I address teachers, my subject is, "The Tragedy of Errors." I attempt to lead the teachers to see the enormous wate of time and energy of the child and teacher in the making and repeating of mistakes.

The most serious of these errors are with simple basic items which the child will use the rest of his life such as the correct spelling of simple, essential words, and the learning by heart of such basic number facts as 9 and 7 are 16.

When the teacher corrects or grades the test papers of her pupils she is annoyed by the number of mistakes she finds. So is the child as he sees the marks on his returned papers. Rarely does a child leave a question unanswered. Still more rarely will he venture in the classroom to say, "I don't know." He supposes he must always answer right or wrong. But as a matter of fact, it is worse for his learning success to answer wrong than not to answer at all.

Adding Injury

What makes the child's errors so serious is that they don't stay corrected; he makes them over and over again; and the most persistent errors tend to be repeated in exactly the same way. This fact irritates the teacher, or the parent who helps the child at home with his lessons. Accordingly the already worried child may be scolded, even punished.

But if a teacher or parent will weigh the matter calmly he will not let himself grow angry at the child for making and repeating errors. The child does not make mistakes to be ornery. He is discouraged and annoyed at himself on account of them. He just makes them in spite of his wish not to do so—when, for example, he spells lesson as l-e-s-s-o-n, he merely makes the association in this way. Having made it this way once he is the more inclined to make it in the same way again or to spell it in some other way, still incorrect. Psychologically, there is no difference between repeating a wrong answer and repeating a right answer. A mistake once made is likely to be made again.

The main problem in good teaching (of facts) at school or home is to keep the child from making a wrong answer or repeating it; that is helping him avoid mistakes.

The child who easily might master without error the spelling of three words or the memorizing of three number facts, at a sitting, might get all mixed up if asked to try to master five or eight of either.

Perhaps the chief reason the average child piles up so many mistakes is because he is supposed to learn more items at a lesson that he will learn accurately.

Always help the child hold fast to what he has already mastered by having him often repeat it mechanically of use it in some sensible way. Good drill is repetition of only what has been learned correctly. Unfortunately, most drill consists of repeating "wrongs" as well as "rights."

Inasmuch as several thousand of my readers recently have written me at 235 East 45th St., N. Y., enclosing a self-addressed envelope in order to receive a sheet of the 100 addition facts and a sheet of the 100 subttraction facts, I fear that some will expect the child to try to learn too many of these at a lesson. Let me entreat parents using these sheets to have the child attack only three or four at a sitting. If the child should attack fifteen or twenty of them at a sitting, the results would be terrible. Please have him study only a few at a time.

W. C. T. U. Seeks To Keep Liquor Away From Army Camps

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 4 (AP) — Delegates to the state convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union urged in a resolution here that the sale of alcoholic beverages in or near military camps be prohibited.

The resolution asserted that "since the training camps will be filled largely with sons of abstaining mothers, the cooperation of all civic and religious bodies is asked" to provide healthful past-time activities and spiritual guidance for conscripts soon to be enrolled for a year's training.

Another resolution urged that members, "realizing that repeal of the eighteenth amendment has increased the use of liquor," support an increased program of "forceful education" as to the effects of intoxicants, and also of cigarets.

Radio and billboard advertising of alcohol, and moving pictures depicting the use of intoxicants were condemned and a resolution asking that "drinking scenes" be banished from the movies.

Members of the Resolutions Committee were Miss Helena Stauffer, Walkersville; Mrs. Leonard Burband, Baltimore; Mrs. Grant German and Mrs. Hamilton Fox, Salisbury; and Mrs. Edwin C. Bixler, New Windsor.

Federal civil service employes have been finger-printed since 1930.

Gontrum Criticizes Sale of Insurance By Certain Groups

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4 (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner John B. Gontrum has served notice that insurance companies "professing to be fraternal beneficial associations," but actually operating as mutual or stock companies would be barred from Maryland.

The action, he said, was taken with "the support of the legitimate fraternal beneficial associations."

These fraternal societies are exempt from taxation, as "benevolent or charitable institutions."

But, Gontrum said, "the operation of insurance companies under fraternal charters x x x deprives the state of revenue to which it is entitled" resulting in "unfair competition" with mutual and stock companies that pay taxes required by law.

Gontrum said he would "recognize in every way legitimate fraternal beneficial associations, as many of these perform fine public service," but the "so-called" fraternals would be barred.

Innocent Man Bolts Jail, Finds Slayer Who Confesses Crime

CANTON, O., Oct. 4 (AP)—A life prisoner who escaped after ten years in order to prove his innocence of murder, got his man today.

Julius Krause, 28, the convict, and Curtiss Kumerle, 28, both gave themselves up and were placed in county jail here tonight.

County Prosecutor A. C. Barthelmew reported Kumerle confessed the slaying for which Krause was imprisoned. It was the fatal beating of C. A. Bartlett, a grocer, in a holdup ten years ago.

Krause and Laban Rohrbach were convicted of the murder and Rohrbach died in Ohio penitentiary in 1936. Krause walked away from a detail of honor prisoners last August at the Ohio state fair grounds at Columbus.

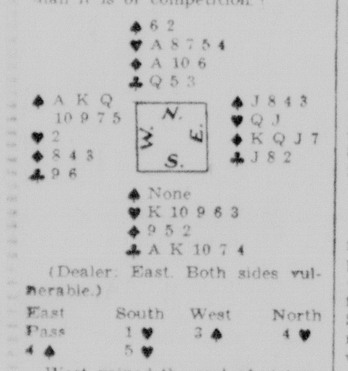
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T MAKE IT EASY

NO DELIGHT, for some players, surpasses that of crowding their opponents into a wrong contract—too high, too low, or even the wrong declaration. They watch for chances to impede the smooth progress of their foes' bidding, and seize upon each one like a cat pouncing on a mouse. When they do that with good judgment, they can make things mighty difficult for smooth, easy-going players to whom bridge is more a matter of following a set of rules than it is of competition.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	3 ♠	4 ♥
4 ♠	5 ♥

West gained the sort of victory he likes the most, by his crowder of a three bid, his being the only table in the entire duplicate tournament that did not produce a small slam bid for North and South. North could do nothing over that except what he did, bid the bare game, and after East edged in with 4-Spades, there was nothing South could do but try 5-Hearts, unless he passed, which might give up a probable game. When the unbid grand slam was made, West was fit to be tied in his glee.

At other tables, West bid only 1-Spade over the 1-Heart, and the rest was easy for his opponents. North now could show his strength with 3-Hearts, and even though East made his then natural call of 3-Spades, South was able to invite slam gently with 4-Clubs. West then went to 4-Spades, but North cue-bid with 5-Diamonds, whereupon South felt strong enough to try 6-Spades.

Average Workman Is Victim of New Deal, Senator Taft Says

WINONA, Minn., Oct. 4 (AP) — Senator Robert A. Taft asserted here that the New Deal had "utterly failed" in achieving its basic principle, which he said was to effect prosperity by economic planning, enforced by government regulation.

The Ohio Republican, making a series of middle western speeches in support of the Willkie-McNary ticket, said the New Deal had failed particularly to restore happiness and income to the under-priviledged.

"There are now more underprivilendged than there ever were before," he said in an address written for his appearance here. "The average workman, the man with a job, the man without a job, the man on the WPA, suffers most from the New Deal's failure to keep its pledges. x x x"

Holt Says FDR Balks "Propaganda" Inquiry

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4 (AP)—Senator Holt (D-WVa) asserted in the Senate that President Roosevelt had prevented an investigation of British "propaganda" in the country.

Describing Noel Coward, playwright, Sir George Paish, economist, and other Englishmen as seeking to involve the United States in Britain's war against Germany, Holt asked why there had been no investigation of their activities.

"Because the president of the United States will not allow an investigation," he declared. He said that if the so-called "union now" organization and other groups urging support for Britain had been set up under German auspices they would be called "subversive."

Among organizations which he described as "union now," "bundles for Britain" and the "William Allen White Committee," and others which he left unnamed, Holt said there were many groups with "administration backing and administration help."

Luke and His Gospel — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Luke 1; Acts 1:1-5; 16:9-15; Colossians 4:14; II Tim. 4:11.

Zacharias, a priest, and his wife, Elisabeth, had no children, but one day while Zacharias was burning incense in the temple, an angel of the Lord appeared to him and told him that his wife would have a child.

An angel of the Lord also appeared some months later to Mary, a virgin, and cousin of Elisabeth, espoused to Joseph of Nazareth, and told her she also would have a child whose name should be called Jesus.

When the angel left her, Mary arose and went to the house of Zacharias and Elisabeth and told her cousin what the angel had said. Elisabeth "spake with a loud voice," saying, "Blessed art thou among women!"

When Elisabeth's babe was born she named him John. Her kinfolk objected, but Zacharias, who had been stricken dumb because he refused to believe the angel, wrote, "His name is John." (GOLDEN TEXT—Luke 1:3, 4)

Luke and His Gospel

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

10-6

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for October 6 is Luke 1; Acts 1:1-5; 16:9-15; Colossians 4:14; II Timothy 4:11, the Golden Text being Luke 1:3, 4, "It seemed good to me also . . . to write . . . that thou mightest know the certainty concerning the things wherein thou wast instructed.")

TODAY'S LESSON contains so many Bible references that we will not have time to comment on them all. We will, therefore, confine ourselves to the first chapter of St. Luke, where he tells in loving fashion, the story of what took place before the births of John the Baptist and Jesus.

St. Luke was a physician and frequently was the companion of St. Paul. "The beloved physician," Paul calls him. He was not a Jew, but a Greek who evidently was converted to Christianity. He did not know Jesus personally, as other disciples did, but evidently had access to many writings about the Master from which he wrote his gospel, as well as hearsay evidence. He commences his gospel with

"Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us,

"Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word;

"It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus." Theophilus is thought to be a lofty Roman friend who had embraced Christianity.

St. Luke tells of Zacharias, a priest of the temple, and his wife, Elisabeth, an aging couple, who were childless. One day when Zacharias was burning incense in the temple, which was one of his duties, an angel of the Lord appeared before him. Zacharias was frightened, but the angel told him not to be afraid. "Thy prayer is heard; and thy wife, Elisabeth, shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John."

This son, said the angel, would bring joy and gladness; he would be great in the sight of the Lord, filled with the Holy Ghost from his birth, and "many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God." Further, he shall "make ready a people prepared for the Lord."

Zacharias Doubts

Zacharias doubted that such a thing could be, and the angel Gabriel told him that for his doubt he would be stricken dumb from then on until the child was born. And so it was, he was unable to utter a word, and after his ministrations in the temple were completed he went home.

Six months after this the angel appeared to Mary, a virgin, in the town of Nazareth, who was engaged to be married to a carpenter named Joseph. To her he announced that she would have a son and His name should be called Jesus. Mary asked how this could be, as she was not married, but the angel answered: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Then he told her of Elisabeth's coming babe.

And sweet Mary answered: "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word." And the angel departed.

Then Mary arose and went to the house of her cousin Elisabeth, and told her what had happened and Elisabeth said: "Blessed art thou among women." And Mary answered:

"My soul doth magnify the Lord,

"For He hath regarded the low estate of His handmaiden: for behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

"For He that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is His name."

Mary stayed with Elisabeth for three months and then returned to Nazareth. Then came the birth of Elisabeth's son. All her neighbors and cousins rejoiced with her in her happiness, and when the baby was born all were there and after the eighth day, when a name was needed, they wanted him called Zacharias, after his father. But Elisabeth said no, the name was to be John. But, said the friends and relatives, no one in the family is named John, and they called to Zacharias to ask what he would say.

All this time Zacharias had been dumb, unable to say a word, as the angel had said. So when he was asked if he didn't want the child named after him, he asked for paper and pen and wrote "His name is John." And everyone was surprised.

After that Zacharias' mouth was opened and his tongue loosened, and he spake, praising God. To the child he said: "And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest; for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare His ways;

"To give knowledge of salvation unto His people by the remission of their sins."

The last verse of the chapter says:

"And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel."

Luke and His Gospel — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Luke 1; Acts 1:1-5; 16:9-15; Colossians 4:14; II Tim. 4:11.

Zacharias, a priest, and his wife, Elisabeth, had no children, but one day while Zacharias was burning incense in the temple, an angel of the Lord appeared to him and told him that his wife would have a child.

An angel of the Lord also appeared some months later to Mary, a virgin, and cousin of Elisabeth, espoused to Joseph of Nazareth, and told her she also would have a child whose name should be called Jesus.

When the angel left her, Mary arose and went to the house of Zacharias and Elisabeth and told her cousin what the angel had said. Elisabeth "spake with a loud voice," saying, "Blessed art thou among women!"

When Elisabeth's babe was born she named him John. Her kinfolk objected, but Zacharias, who had been stricken dumb because he refused to believe the angel, wrote, "His name is John." (GOLDEN TEXT—Luke 1:3, 4)

Luke and His Gospel

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

10-5

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for October 6 is Luke 1; Acts 1:1-5; 16:9-15; Colossians 4:14; II Timothy 4:11, the Golden Text being Luke 1:3, 4, "It seemed good to me also . . . to write . . . that thou mightest know the certainty concerning the things wherein thou wast instructed.")

TODAY'S LESSON contains so many Bible references that we will not have time to comment on them all. We will, therefore, confine ourselves to the first chapter of St. Luke, where he tells in loving fashion, the story of what took place before the births of John the Baptist and Jesus.

St. Luke was a physician and frequently was the companion of St. Paul. "The beloved physician," Paul calls him. He was not a Jew, but a Greek who evidently was converted to Christianity. He did not know Jesus personally, as other disciples did, but evidently had access to many writings about the Master from which he wrote his gospel, as well as hearsay evidence. He commences his gospel with

"Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us,

"Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word;

"It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus." Theophilus is thought to be a lofty Roman friend who had embraced Christianity.

St. Luke tells of Zacharias, a priest of the temple, and his wife, Elisabeth, an aging couple, who were childless. One day when Zacharias was burning incense in the temple, which was one of his duties, an angel of the Lord appeared before him. Zacharias was frightened, but the angel told him not to be afraid. "Thy prayer is heard; and thy wife, Elisabeth, shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John."

This son, said the angel, would bring joy and gladness; he would be great in the sight of the Lord, filled with the Holy Ghost from his birth, and "many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God." Further, he shall "make ready a people prepared for the Lord."

Zacharias Doubts

Zacharias doubted that such a thing could be, and the angel Gabriel told him that for his doubt he would be stricken dumb from then on until the child was born. And so it was, he was unable to utter a word, and after his ministrations in the temple were completed he went home.

Six months after this the angel appeared to Mary, a virgin, in the town of Nazareth, who was engaged to be married to a carpenter named Joseph. To her he announced that she would have a son and His name should be called Jesus. Mary asked how this could be, as she was not married, but the angel answered: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Then he told her of Elisabeth's coming babe.

And sweet Mary answered: "Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word." And the angel departed.

Then Mary arose and went to the house of her cousin Elisabeth, and told her what had happened and Elisabeth said: "Blessed art thou among women." And Mary answered:

"My soul doth magnify the Lord.

"For He hath regarded the low estate of His handmaiden: for behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

"For He that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is His name."

Mary stayed with Elisabeth for three months and then returned to Nazareth. Then came the birth of Elisabeth's son. All her neighbors and cousins rejoiced with her in her happiness, and when the baby was born all were there and after the eighth day, when a name was needed, they wanted him called Zacharias, after his father. But Elisabeth said no, the name was to be John. But, said the friends and relatives, no one in the family is named John, and they called to Zacharias to ask what he would say.

All this time Zacharias had been dumb, unable to say a word, as the angel had said. So when he was asked if he didn't want the child named after him, he asked for paper and pen and wrote "His name is John." And everyone was surprised.

After that Zacharias' mouth was opened and his tongue loosened, and he spake, praising God. To the child he said: "And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest; for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare His ways;

"To give knowledge of salvation unto His people by the remission of their sins."

The last verse of the chapter says:

"And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel."

Football and World Series Game Take High Spots Today on Radio

More New Programs Will Be Heard Today and Sunday

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD,
Associated Press Radio Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—For the second time this year it is another football and baseball Saturday on the networks, with the world series, as scheduled, thrown in for good measure.

Here are the chain offerings from various gridirons, three to be exact: WEAF-NBC 2:15 p. m. Princeton vs. Vanderbilt; WJZ-NBC and WABC-CBS 3:15 Duke vs. Tennessee; MBS at approximately 4, Minnesota vs. Nebraska.

World series broadcasting will be continued by the MBS and its augmented network at 1:15, planning to pick up football right afterward.

More Premiers

Program premieres still are getting in their good work, with these as the Saturday billings: WABC-CBS 8:30 Wayne King and his waltzing orchestra with songs by Buddy Clark; MBS 9:30 New Dave Elman program, Contact, in which the guests will be persons who have a real reason to contact a friend or a relative; MBS 10 Return of the hour-long programs, Chicago Theater of the Air, opening with "The Vagabond King."

WABC-CBS is re-arranging part of its Saturday morning schedule in this manner: Honest Abe at 9:30, Welcome Lewis singing bee at 10 and the Dirt Dauber at 10:30.

Europe list: NBC 8 a. m., 12 mid; CBS 8, 9 a. m., 6:45, 8:55, 10:45 p. m.; MBS 10:45 a. m., 6, 11, 11:30 p. m.; WEAF-NBC 1:45, 7:15, 7:45; WJZ-NBC 9:30. . . . At 9:15 on MBS Mms. Genevieve Tabouris, French journalist, is to talk on "Truth and the Modern World."

Sunday Features

The Parade of Premieres for the networks on Sunday will include the return of Jack Benny and Mary with a show not a great deal unlike the general pattern patter of past seasons.

Detailing the premieres: WEAF-NBC—1:30 p. m. On Your Job for Defense; 7 Jack Benny . . . WABC-CBS—4:30 Invitation to Learning starts winter season; 6 Conrad Nagle's theater, Laurence Olivier in "I'll Never Forget." . . . MBS—5 Musical Steel makers; 8:45 Dorothy Thompson comment series.

MBS has made every provision to continue broadcasting of the Cincinnati-Detroit world's series should play continue beyond the first four days. The time continues at 1:15.

Discussion Periods

Discussion: WEAF-NBC 2:30 Chicago roundtable, topic postponed at the last minute from last week, "Will Hitler Attack America Next?" MBS 8 American Forum, reduced to 45 minutes to make way for a sponsored series by Dorothy Thompson, topic "American-Japanese Relations."

Europe list: NBC 8, 9 a. m., 12 mid; CBS 9 a. m., 7, 8:55, 11 p. m.; MBS 10:30, 11:30 a. m., 7:30, 7:45, 11:15 p. m., 12 mid.; WJZ-NBS 3:15, 7:15; WEAF-NBC 3:30.

Finale for the summer Barlow symphony series; WEAF-NBC 3 NBC String Symphony, Dr. Frank Black; WABC-CBS 5 Women's symphony, Frank Parker tenor; WABC-CBS 9 Sunday evening hour, Richard Crooks tenor.

A Yom Kippur program is announced for WABC-CBS at 2:35, while Helen Hayes at 8 will offer to CBS the drama "Love from a Stranger."

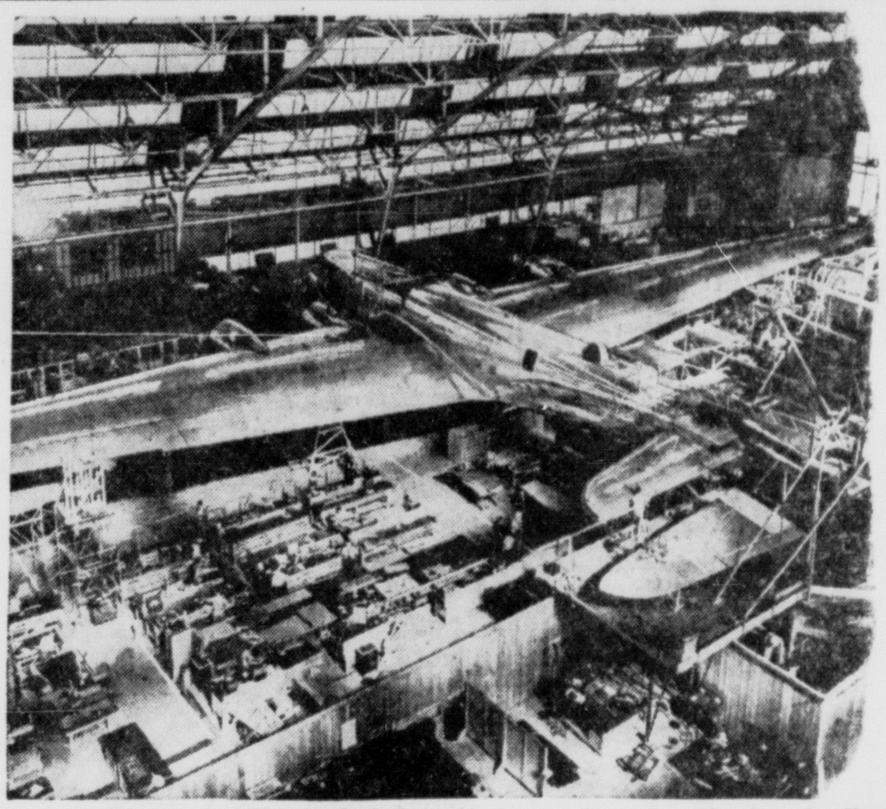
U. S. BUILDS WORLD'S LARGEST MILITARY PLANE



A deadly threat to any would-be invader is the world's largest military plane, "Guardian of a Hemisphere," above, which was built by the Douglas Aircraft corporation at Santa Monica, Cal. Capable of taking off with a gross weight of 164,000 pounds, the four-engined plane will be flown soon for the first time. The giant's armament is a closely guarded military secret.

Now Use Improved Vicks Way

To Relieve Misery of Colds

Mothers everywhere are discovering how easy it is to relieve misery of colds with a "VapoRub Massage"—relieve coughing, muscular soreness or tightness.

Use of Milk in Diet Adds Body Weight And Stature Many Experiments Show

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In these days when the physical stamina of our people must be brought to the highest pitch of efficiency, the science of dietetics is being called upon to guide us. Fortunately within the past two decades the science has made greater strides than in all the previous period of its history.

We consider a sturdy, strong tree and feel that it must have attained it growth and strength from the soil in which it grew, and from the regularity of rain and sunshine. So with human beings. Nothing can take the place of good heredity—and growth is to the greatest degree dependent on that. But given a good ancestry, a favorable environment, the determining factor in growth seems to be the food elements taken in during the early years of life.

Inadequate Diet

We list an inadequate diet as consisting of: cornmeal, milled wheat flour, sweet potatoes, cabbage, collards, fat pork, lard, cane sugar, molasses and vitamin-free casein.

This is, in fact, a standard diet—the Goldberger diet—used in nutritional laboratories to produce food deficiency conditions. It furnishes adequate fuel, energy and building material for the body, but the body will not thrive on it.

The opposite—the adequate diet—consists of milk, eggs, meat, potatoes, whole wheat bread, cereals, green vegetables and fruits.

If certain elements of this sort of diet are pushed striking periods of growth result. In London, Dr. Carry Mann made the experiment of observing separate groups of children. Careful records of height, weight and physical fitness were kept of each member of both groups. One group on an adequate basic diet gained 3 8-10 pounds and grew 1 8-10 inches. In the other group on the same basic diet but with the addition of one pint of milk a day, they gained in the same period of time 6 9-10 pounds and grew 2 6-10 inches.

If observed for a long time the two groups were seen to carry out this tendency regularly and continuously. Dr. Man wrote, "The casual visitor would never fail to recognize the boys receiving the extra ration of milk. They were obviously more fit."

The menace to the population of Europe in the present crisis consists in the fact that their supplies are deficient in the very foods that increase growth and bodily strength. In our own country experts say that if an adequate diet is maintained for the entire population our consumption of vegetables and citrus fruits should be increased 59 to 75 per cent; butter, milk and eggs 50 to 94 per cent and meat 10 to 30 per cent.

Small Outbreak of Diphtheria Reported

LA PLATA, Md., Oct. 4 (AP) — Charles county health officials moved quickly here to control a small outbreak of diphtheria through a double program of immunization and quarantine.

A "flare-up" of the disease brought seven cases in August, and two reported so far in October. Two other cases were reported in Hollywood, St. Mary's county.

In Baltimore, Dr. C. H. Halliday, director of the Division of Communicable Diseases, state department of health, praised Dr. D. S. Fisher, Charles county health officer, for "doing a very good job, and bringing the situation under control."

Dr. Fisher reported that six of the seven August cases occurred in one family living at Mt. Victoria, with the other case occurring at Malcolm.

Ruined Kisamul castle on Barra island, Scottish Hebrides, was once owned by the MacNeils. The legend goes that one of its owners refused the hospitality of Noah, as "the MacNeill had a boat of his own."

Approximately 15,000,000 people inhabit the Nile valley.

Bob Sherwood! Which One! Author or New Producer!

HOLLYWOOD—There are two Robert Sherwoods:

1. Robert E. Sherwood, 44, author of the Broadway success, "There Shall Be No Night."

2. Robert C. Sherwood, 29, Hollywood's newest film producer.

Robert C. Sherwood spent several years learning how to be a producer. He wanted to learn about music, so he took up the oboe and played two years with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. He studied acting and staging at the Pasadena Community Playhouse. He put in some time as radio producer, writer and commentator.

Finally he got a half-million dollars capital from New York bankers and bought the novel "Legacy" by Charles Bonner, which is to be his first picture.

He has signed a releasing deal with Columbia Pictures and has contracted Warner Baxter, Constance Bennett and Elsa Maxwell for parts. Gregory Ratoff is to direct.

The young producer gets plenty of phone calls from old friends of Robert E. Sherwood wanting to know what the heck is this and from young actors begging him to let them read his latest work.

But he hopes that pretty soon people will catch on that there are two Bob Sherwoods in the entertainment business—and that Robert C. Sherwood is doing all right, thank you.

Egypt's Life Blood Is Muddy Water

A desert, a narrow valley, a river—that is Egypt, threatened today by advancing Italian troops. Egypt in 1940 is the same in one respect as the Egypt in which Joseph established the first ever-normal granary: It literally lives on the Nile. Halt the river for a year and disaster would befall the approximately 15,000,000 people crowded into the narrow valley. Egypt h a total area of 383,000 square mi but a permanently populated ar of only 15,000 square miles, all the valley.

If certain elements of this sort of diet are pushed striking periods of growth result. In London, Dr. Carry Mann made the experiment of observing separate groups of children. Careful records of height, weight and physical fitness were kept of each member of both groups. One group on an adequate basic diet gained 3 8-10 pounds and grew 1 8-10 inches. In the other group on the same basic diet but with the addition of one pint of milk a day, they gained in the same period of time 6 9-10 pounds and grew 2 6-10 inches.

If observed for a long time the two groups were seen to carry out this tendency regularly and continuously. Dr. Man wrote, "The casual visitor would never fail to recognize the boys receiving the extra ration of milk. They were obviously more fit."

The menace to the population of Europe in the present crisis consists in the fact that their supplies are deficient in the very foods that increase growth and bodily strength. In our own country experts say that if an adequate diet is maintained for the entire population our consumption of vegetables and citrus fruits should be increased 59 to 75 per cent; butter, milk and eggs 50 to 94 per cent and meat 10 to 30 per cent.

Small Outbreak of Diphtheria Reported

LA PLATA, Md., Oct. 4 (AP) — Charles county health officials moved quickly here to control a small outbreak of diphtheria through a double program of immunization and quarantine.

A "flare-up" of the disease brought seven cases in August, and two reported so far in October. Two other cases were reported in Hollywood, St. Mary's county.

In Baltimore, Dr. C. H. Halliday, director of the Division of Communicable Diseases, state department of health, praised Dr. D. S. Fisher, Charles county health officer, for "doing a very good job, and bringing the situation under control."

Dr. Fisher reported that six of the seven August cases occurred in one family living at Mt. Victoria, with the other case occurring at Malcolm.

Ruined Kisamul castle on Barra island, Scottish Hebrides, was once owned by the MacNeils. The legend goes that one of its owners refused the hospitality of Noah, as "the MacNeill had a boat of his own."

Approximately 15,000,000 people inhabit the Nile valley.

Bob Sherwood! Which One! Author or New Producer!

HOLLYWOOD—There are two Robert Sherwoods:

1. Robert E. Sherwood, 44, author of the Broadway success, "There Shall Be No Night."

2. Robert C. Sherwood, 29, Hollywood's newest film producer.

Robert C. Sherwood spent several years learning how to be a producer. He wanted to learn about music, so he took up the oboe and played two years with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra. He studied acting and staging at the Pasadena Community Playhouse. He put in some time as radio producer, writer and commentator.

Finally he got a half-million dollars capital from New York bankers and bought the novel "Legacy" by Charles Bonner, which is to be his first picture.

He has signed a releasing deal with Columbia Pictures and has contracted Warner Baxter, Constance Bennett and Elsa Maxwell for parts. Gregory Ratoff is to direct.

The young producer gets plenty of phone calls from old friends of Robert E. Sherwood wanting to know what the heck is this and from young actors begging him to let them read his latest work.

But he hopes that pretty soon people will catch on that there are two Bob Sherwoods in the entertainment business—and that Robert C. Sherwood is doing all right, thank you.

Egypt's Life Blood Is Muddy Water

A desert, a narrow valley, a river—that is Egypt, threatened today by advancing Italian troops. Egypt in 1940 is the same in one respect as the Egypt in which Joseph established the first ever-normal granary: It literally lives on the Nile. Halt the river for a year and disaster would befall the approximately 15,000,000 people crowded into the narrow valley. Egypt has a total area of 383,000 square miles but a permanently populated area of only 15,000 square miles, all in the valley.

Under the plan, it is said, $212,000 has been designated for flying fields at these two points in Garrett county, $50,000 at Grantsville and $162,000 at Oakland.

Whether or not the plans will materialize depends upon the decision of Congress in making the appropriation recently requested by the president. It is reported the program includes approximately thirty communities in Maryland and some 4,000 over the nation.

Band Is Organized

Testimony Is Completed in Ashby Trial

Arguments in Oakland Case Will Be Heard October 12

OAKLAND, Oct. 4.—Testimony was completed today in the Garrett County Circuit Court in the indictment against Jesse J. Ashby, Jr., treasurer of the county, who is charged with having fraudulently obtained from the county commissioners the sum of $6,099.11, belonging to the county.

Argument in the case will be heard Saturday, October 12, it was announced by Judge D. Lindley Sloan and William A. Huster, who have been sitting in the case.

The charge against Ashby came as a result of several months' auditing of the accounts of the county by certified public accountants Wooden and Benson, Baltimore, and the information furnished the commissioners by the auditors was the basis upon which they proceeded.

Mr. Ashby was arrested several months ago and at a preliminary hearing before Trial Magistrate Charles F. White on July 24, he decreed there was insufficient evidence to hold the treasurer. The grand jury, however, returned three indictments, one of false pretense and two for embezzlement. It was the former case which was tried today.

The item in the report upon which the case is based was that of a double credit for discount on taxes collected, levy of 1934, $3,120.22; levy of 1935, $2,968.89, a total of $6,099.11.

The defense introduced another audit made by Daniel H. Carroll which showed Ashby to have his accounts in order. The prosecution exhibited the duplicate bills and the duplicate county orders which Mr. Ashby received in payment.

Others testifying today were G. Blaine Giessman, president of the Board of County Commissioners; W. G. Meyers, clerk; H. P. Stuck, bookkeeper and auditor for Mr. Ashby.

Extension of Electric Line Will Serve 138 Garrett County Families

OAKLAND, Md., Oct. 4 (AP) — A 27-mile extension of electric lines in Garrett county to serve 138 families now without electricity was announced today by the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company.

The announcement, made through the company's local branch, the West Maryland Power Company, said construction of the lines already was started and that service might be started by Christmas.

The extension was the second power line development to be announced for Garrett county within a week. Last week the Maryland Public Service Commission granted permission to the Somerset Rural Electrification Cooperative, Inc., to build approximately thirty-one miles of power lines in the Northern section of the county.

That project will serve ninety-two families in the Selbysport-Friendsville-Fearer area and more are expected to be added.

The new lines of the West Maryland Power Company, which has headquarters here, will extend East and North from Deer Park.

The extensions are:

From Deer Park to Sand Flat, and from Sand Flat on United States Route 219 to the old Dodge school house, a distance of 7.6 miles. Thirty-five patrons will be served.

From Deer Park to Altamont, and from the intersection of the Deer Park-Swanton highway to Swanton, a distance of 10.5 miles. Sixty-six patrons will be served.

From Loch Lynn Heights through Pleasant Valley community, a distance of 8.75 miles. Thirty-seven customers will be served.

Testimony Is Completed in Ashby Trial

Arguments in Oakland Case Will Be Heard October 12

OAKLAND, Oct. 4.—Testimony was completed today in the Garrett County Circuit Court in the indictment against Jesse J. Ashby, Jr., treasurer of the county, who is charged with having fraudulently obtained from the county commissioners the sum of $6,099.11, belonging to the county.

Argument in the case will be heard Saturday, October 12, it was announced by Judge D. Lindley Sloan and William A. Huster, who have been sitting in the case.

The charge against Ashby came as a result of several months' auditing of the accounts of the county by certified public accountants Wooden and Benson, Baltimore, and the information furnished the commissioners by the auditors was the basis upon which they proceeded.

Mr. Ashby was arrested several months ago and at a preliminary hearing before Trial Magistrate Charles F. White on July 24, he decreed there was insufficient evidence to hold the treasurer. The grand jury, however, returned three indictments, one of false pretense and two for embezzlement. It was the former case which was tried today.

The item in the report upon which the case is based was that of a double credit for discount on taxes collected, levy of 1934, $3,120.22; levy of 1935, $2,968.89, a total of $6,099.11.

The defense introduced another audit made by Daniel H. Carroll which showed Ashby to have his accounts in order. The prosecution exhibited the duplicate bills and the duplicate county orders which Mr. Ashby received in payment.

Others testifying today were G. Blaine Giessman, president of the Board of County Commissioners; W. G. Meyers, clerk; H. P. Stuck, bookkeeper and auditor for Mr. Ashby.

The money will be used in completing the emergency airfield between Thomas and Davis which has been used for a number of years by local pilots and barnstormers.

Wires were also received here from both Senator M. M. Neely and Randolph, announcing presidential approval of a $9,183 WPA allotment to be used in improving the water system of the city.

The seventeen mile line has been under construction since last June, and was supervised by L. W. George, the Monongahela System assistant superintendent of lines. Fleming Upholds Wage-Hour Law

Says Overtime Will Meet Problem That Hit France

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Oct. 4 (AP) — Public utilities may expect a broadened market as the result of hour limitations upon workers, Philip B. Fleming told a state convention of utilities officials today.

"The forty hour week did not defeat France," asserted Fleming, administrator of the federal Wage-Hour law, turning momentarily to comment on the possible relationship of war to shorter working hours.

"Our forty-hour week permits overtime at extra pay," he continued, "but does not forfeit machine use, while in France, with enactment of the forty-hour law in 1936 it became virtually impossible to work overtime regardless of the wage scale for overtime."

Fleming suggested hiring and training men in industry and "overwork the machines and not the men."

Meanwhile, a move to consolidate the West Virginia and Virginia utilities associations gained impetus when the executive committee was handed a plan for submission to the Virginia group.

G. L. Furr, of Bluefield, was elected president of the organization.

Other officers were H. B. McCune of Wheeling, first vice-president; O. F. Lough, of Fairmont, second vice-president; Bliss McCrum, re-elected secretary; G. B. Moir, treasurer, and J. W. Cummins, assistant treasurer, both re-elected.

Rio de Janeiro, capital of Brazil, was established by the Portuguese after a victory over the Indians in 1567.

Dawson Attacks Cost of Feeding Jail Prisoners

GOP Nominee for Governor also Urges Reduction in State Employes

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 4 (AP) — Feeding county jail prisoners at cost and reduction of the number of state employes were proposed tonight by D. Boone Dawson to cut governmental cost, which he declared "has been mounting much faster than it should."

The Republican gubernatorial nominee, citing increasing population as the reason for rising costs, said in a radio address that "there are a great many economies that must be put in effect if our tax system is to remain sound.

"I think an honest effort should be made to reduce the costs of government by reducing the number of employes. There are a number of ways in which tax money may be saved.

"The principal one which I have in mind at this time is known as the sheriff's board bill. There is no sound reason why a sheriff should be paid more for feeding a prisoner than the actual cost required to feed them properly. This item alone in West Virginia will save the taxpayers thousands of dollars if properly administered and carried out."

Dawson commented that he had found during his administration as mayor of Charleston that citizens are willing to pay for public improvements and projects devoted to advancing the status of their community, "but I am likewise convinced that the taxpayers are not willing to pay taxes for the purpose of building up a political machine or to add a long list of people to a payroll to win an election.

"During every election year since 1932, we have seen the relief rolls increase and those who are employed on the WPA added to during the primaries and general elections, and immediately after the election was over, a great many of them were cut off and the rolls were again cut down."

"The taxpayers x x x are entitled to see that they get 100 cents of value for every tax dollar they pay."

Leading Stocks Sell Off during Further Light Profit-Taking

Closing Losses Range from Fractions to a Point

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — Further light profit selling pressure turned leading stocks downward in today's market.

While most pivotal issues finished above their lows, closing losses ranged from fractions to a point, with a few inactives off more than 3. Scattered airlines, coppers and specialties managed to emerge with modest advances.

Transfers amounted to only 466,080 shares compared with 784,885 yesterday.

Partly responsible for the day's retreat, broker said, was the practice recently adopted by many traders of lightening accounts as insurance against untoward happenings abroad over the weekend.

Persistence of constructive business news at home, with the expansion of defense spending, it was suggested, served to keep liquidation at a minimum and even brought in modest buying for favored issues.

Under water were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Deere, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Westinghouse, American Can, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, N. Y. Central, Western Union, General Steel Castings Preferred, Kennecott and Texas Corp.

On the upside were U. S. Rubber, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Chesapeake & Ohio, Loft, Market Street Railway preferred, Eastern Air Lines, Pan American Airways and United Air Lines.

Backward in the Curb were American Cyanamid "B", Bell Aircraft, Gulf Oil, Jones & Laughlin, Pennroad and Wright Hargreaves. Up a trifle were American Gas, Phoenix securities and Glen Alden coal. Sales were around 82,600 shares against 104,000 Thursday.

Senator Neely Predicts Democrats Will Carry W. Va. by 200,000 Votes

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Oct. 4 (AP) — U. S. Senator M. M. Neely compared what he termed "Democratic accomplishments" and "Republican promises" in the keynote address of the eighth annual West Virginia Young Democratic convention today, and predicted the party would carry the state this November by "at least 200,000 votes."

Appealing for continuing party organization, the Democratic candidate for governor asserted that "there is no danger of a Republican victory unless you believe that democracy can elect its own without putting votes in the ballot boxes."

Neely was introduced by Buford C. Tynes, Finance Chairman of the Democratic State Committee as "the next governor of West Virginia" and received a 50-second ovation from the crowd of nearly 1,000 delegates and others, the demonstration ending in a banner-dotted parade which delayed his address twelve minutes.

Otherwise, the first session of the two-day convention, and the only general session on the day's program, brought adoption by voice vote of the recommended nominations of thirty-two delegates and thirty-two alternates to the Young Democratic National Convention in 1941.

A Novel Party

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Last June I was maid-of-honor at my girl friend's marriage. Since then she has invited me to her new home for dinner several times. On each of these occasions she has had very nice young men to meet me. I'd like to give a party and invite my friend and her husband, and these young men, about half dozen, as a return courtesy, but I'm puzzled to know just what kind of party to give. Our house is small, and if I ask girls for all six of the men, it would be too big an affair for me to swing.

Someone mentioned to me that you had suggestions on tap for out-of-doors affairs. What are they like, and could they be given at public parks?

As the city from which you write me had a good public park, in which picknickers are welcome, I would suggest, before the weather gets too cool, you give an out-of-doors evening picnic, where a dozen or more persons could be very comfortably entertained. Your park has fireplaces, where supper can be cooked. Benches and tables from which it can be served, are also provided.

I've just had an interesting letter from a girl who gave a roof party at her apartment house, where fortunes were told and supper was served. If you will send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope, I'll be very glad to forward my leaflet with suggestions for simple, out-of-doors entertaining, and these parties can be given through the autumn. In fact, they're pleasanter when the weather is cool than during the sultry dog days.

Draft Didn't Hurry Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Jim and I have had to stand plenty of razzing on account of our sudden marriage. Honest to goodness we've been engaged for two and a half years, and Jim wasn't sneaking behind the Draft for the purpose of claiming any exemption. The thing that started us to the altar was reading somthing in your column to the effect that everyone was married as economically as possible owing to the state of affairs the world over.

So Jim and I who'd been thinking about a church wedding, supper and honeymoon, decided to cut it all out and have the simplest of weddings. We sent for your wedding leaflet and were married in the parsonage, because Jom belongs to one church and I belong to another, and we decided we weren't going to squabble over religion. I was married in my new fall suit and had a corsage of roses.

We invited our friends by note, or over the phone, to come to our new home, a nice little bungalow, for an inexpensive wedding collation. We had wedding cake, sandwiches, coffee, a fruit punch, and that was all. We are very happy and we're not a "Draft" bride and groom. And this is to thank you for your inexpensive suggestions for a nice wedding.

HAPPY BRIDE

Best wishes to the young people who decline to be called "Draft bride and groom." Over-elaborate weddings are not considered good taste these days and when no one knows just what is going to happen next. If anyone would care to have these inexpensive wedding suggestions, I'd be glad to send them the leaflet on receipt of a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope.

A Difficult Choice

Dear Miss Fairfax:

How does a man know when he's in love with the right girl? I know two very nice girls and know I could spend the rest of my life happily with either one. But how can I decide which one I love the most? I think both women are in love with me. You might say that neither is the right girl, and I should wait until the right one comes along. I know I could never meet more lovely, charming girls than these.

I'm in my last year at the university, and want to be married right away after I gradute. A fairly good job is assured me. Please help me.

SENIOR

Inasmuch as there are two girls now, either of whom is equally charming to you, don't you think you're liable to meet one or two who would seem desirable, after you finish college? A young man, it seems to me, about to acquire a college diploma, would do well to wait a while before he aspires to that more important document—a marriage license.

Buying Ring on Credit

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going "steady" with my girl friend for several years and she hinted that it's time we became engaged. I thought I might buy her a small diamond, but as the salary I earn is so small, I hesitate. I have to help support my mother and can't marry for at least three years.

Is there anything wrong about buying a ring on credit, or is it something to be ashamed of-

WONDERING

As you and the girl have had an understanding for several years, I don't see any possible objection to your buying her an engagement ring on credit.

I can't see why any girl should insist on an engagement when she knows you can't marry for three years. Many girls are waiving engagement rings altogether, and are willing to save the money for something later on.

My best wishes to you both.

Deanna Durbin Is Kissed on Screen

In her third consecutive picture, Deanna Durbin is kissed before the cameras. This time, however, it is a real, oldfashioned kiss, delivered on the proper spot with the proper guesto. The performance occurs in Universal's "Spring Parade," the star's latest picture which opens at the New Liberty theater today.

Deanna was screen-kissed for the first time in "First Love." It was a bashful sort of a peck, performed by Robert Stack, who became known as the man who first kissed the young star. That kissing took place a few seasons ago and since that time, Deanna has approached more nearly to full-blossomed young womanhood. In "It's a Date" she was kissed again, this time by Walter Pidgeon, and once again the asculation was on the frigid side, for Walter merely brushed her forehead with his lips.

But this time the man on the firing line in Bob Cummings and the kissing is for keeps.

Barrymore Picture Is Scheduled at Strand

Production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck has backed Barrymore with a supporting cast which includes Mary Beth Hughes, Gregory Ratoff, John Payne, Anne Baxter and Lionel Atwill.

In the film Barrymore portrays a great actor who is given the lead in a play that is about to flop. Giving up, he ad libs his way through, and to everyone's surprise the play becomes a howling success. The film winds up in a funny surprise ending.

The second feature on the program is "The Quarterback", a football frolic starring Wayne Morris, Virginia Dale, Lillian Cornell, and William Frawley.

The Pan American Revue on the stage and "Way of All Flesh" on the screen show today for the last times.

Maureen O'Sullivan Will Be at the Maryland

Maureen O'Sullivan appears with Robert Young in "Sporting Blood," which will be screened Monday at the Maryland theater.

Among her recent pictures are "A Day at the Races," starring the Marx Brothers, "My Dear Miss Aldrich," "A Yank at Oxford," produced at the M-G-M British studios in England; "Port of Seven Seas," "Hold That Kiss," "The Crowd Roars," "Spring Madness," "Let Us Live," "Tarzan Finds a Son" and "Pride and Prejudice."

Rachel Crothers Drama Is Billed at Embassy

Fredric March returns to films to co-star with Joan Crawford in "Susan and God," picturization of the Rachel Crothers stage hit, which opens tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

Also showing at the Embassy are "Main Street Lawyer," Tex Ritter in "The Cowboy from Sundown," Merle O'Beron in "Over the Moon" another chapter of "Terry and the Pirates."

HORSE OWNER

Lewis Stone deserts his celebrated role of Judge Hardy of the Hardy Family series to play the race horse owner in "Sporting Blood," drama of the sport of kings, which opens Monday at the Maryland theater. Robert Young and Maureen O'Sullivan are seen as the lovers of the story, with William Gargan and Lynne Carver in prominent supporting roles.

Two Features Are On Garden Program

Russell Hayden and Britt Wood back him up as the two other members of the famous Bar 20 trio.

The other feature at the Garden is "Fugitive at Large," starring Jack Holt and Patricia Ellis.

Benzene was discovered by Faraday in 1825.

Leading Stocks Sell Off during Further Light Profit-Taking

Closing Losses Range from Fractions to a Point

By FREDERICK GARDNER

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — Further light profit selling pressure turned leading stocks downward in today's market.

While most pivotal issues finished above their lows, closing losses ranged from fractions to a point, with a few inactives off more than 3. Scattered airlines, coppers and specialties managed to emerge with modest advances.

Transfers amounted to only 466,080 shares compared with 784,885 yesterday.

Partly responsible for the day's retreat, broker said, was the practice recently adopted by many traders of lightening accounts as insurance against untoward happenings abroad over the weekend.

Persistence of constructive business news at home, with the expansion of defense spending, it was suggested, served to keep liquidation at a minimum and even brought in modest buying for favored issues.

Under water were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Deere, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Westinghouse, American Can, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, U. S. Gypsum, N. Y. Central, Western Union, General Steel Castings Preferred, Kennecott and Texas Corp.

On the upside were U. S. Rubber, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Chesapeake & Ohio, Loft, Market Street Railway preferred, Eastern Air Lines, Pan American Airways, and United Air Lines.

Backward in the Curb were American Cyanamid "B", Bell Aircraft, Gulf Oil, Jones & Laughlin, Pennroad and Wright Hargreaves. Up a trifle were American Gas, Phoenix securities and Glen Alden coal. Sales were around 82,000 shares against 104,000 Thursday.

Senator Neely Predicts Democrats Will Carry W. Va. by 200,000 Votes

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Oct. 4 (AP) — U. S. Senator M. M. Neely compared what he termed "Democratic accomplishments" and "Republican promises" in the keynote address of the eighth angual West Virginia Young Democratic convention today, and predicted the party would carry the state this November by "at least 200,000 votes."

Appealing for continuing party organization, the Democratic candidate for governor asserted that "there is no danger of a Republican victory unless you believe that democracy can elect its own without putting votes in the ballot boxes."

Neely was introduced by Buford C. Tynes, Finance Chairman of the Democratic State Committee as "the next governor of West Virginia" and received a 50-second ovation from the crowd of nearly 1,000 delegates and others, the demonstration ending in a banner-dotted parade which delayed his address twelve minutes.

Otherwise, the first session of the two-day convention, and the only general session on the day's program, brought adoption by voice vote of the recommended nominations of thirty-two delegates and thirty-two alternates to the Young Democratic National Convention in 1941.

A Novel Party

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Last June I was maid-of-honor at my girl friend's marriage. Since then she has invited me to her new home for dinner several times. On each of these occasions she has had very nice young men to meet me. I'd like to give a party and invite my friend and her husband, and these young men, about half dozen, as a return courtesy, but I'm puzzled to know just what kind of party to give. Our house is small, and if I ask girls for all six of the men, it would be too big an affair for me to swing.

Someone mentioned to me that you had suggestions on tap for out-of-doors affairs. What are they like, and could they be given at public parks?

As the city from which you write me had a good public park, in which picknickers are welcome, I would suggest, before the weather gets too cool, you give an out-of-doors evening picnic, where a dozen or more persons could be very comfortably entertained. Your park has fireplaces, where supper can be cooked. Benches and tables from which it can be served, are also provided.

I've just had an interesting letter from a girl who gave a roof party at her apartment house, where fortunes were told and supper was served. If you will send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope, I'll be very glad to forward my leaflet with suggestions for simple, out-of-doors entertaining, and these parties can be given through the autumn. In fact, they're pleasanter when the weather is cool than during the sultry dog days.

Draft Didn't Hurry Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Jim and I have had to stand plenty of razzing on account of our sudden marriage. Honest to goodness we've been engaged for two and a half years, and Jim wasn't sneaking behind the Draft for the purpose of claiming any exemption. The thing that started us to the altar was reading somthing in your column to the effect that everyone was married as economically as possible owing to the state of affairs the world over.

So Jim and I who'd been thinking about a church wedding, supper and honeymoon, decided to cut it all out and have the simplest of weddings. We sent for your wedding leaflet and were married in the parsonage, because Jom belongs to one church and I belong to another, and we decided we weren't going to squabble over religion. I was married in my new fall suit and had a corsage of roses.

We invited our friends by note, or over the phone, to come to our new home, a nice little bungalow, for an inexpensive wedding collation. We had wedding cake, sandwiches, coffee, a fruit punch, and that was all. We are very happy and we're not a "Draft" bride and groom. And this is to thank you for your inexpensive suggestions for a nice wedding.

HAPPY BRIDE

Best wishes to the young people who decline to be called "Draft bride and groom." Over-elaborate weddings are not considered good taste these days and when no one knows just what is going to happen next. If anyone would care to have these inexpensive wedding suggestions, I'd be glad to send them the leaflet on receipt of a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope.

A Difficult Choice

Dear Miss Fairfax:

How does a man know when he's in love with the right girl? I know two very nice girls and know I could spend the rest of my life happily with either one. But how can I decide which one I love the most? I think both women are in love with me. You might say that neither is the right girl, and I should wait until the right one comes along. I know I could never meet more lovely, charming girls than these.

I'm in my last year at the university, and want to be married right away after I gradute. A fairly good job is assured me. Please help me.

SENIOR

Inasmuch as there are two girls now, either of whom is equally charming to you, don't you think you're liable to meet one or two who would seem desirable after you finish college? A young man, it seems to me, about to acquire a college diploma, would do well to wait a while before he aspires to that more important document—a marriage license.

Buying Ring on Credit

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going "steady" with my girl friend for several years and she hinted that it's time we became engaged. I thought I might buy her a small diamond, but as the salary I earn is so small, I hesitate. I have to help support my mother and can't marry for at least three years.

Is there anything wrong about buying a ring on credit, or is it something to be ashamed of?

WONDERING

As you and the girl have had an understanding for several years, I don't see any possible objection to your buying her an engagement ring on credit.

I can't see why any girl should insist on an engagement when she knows you can't marry for three years. Many girls are waiving engagement rings altogether, and are willing to save the money for something later on.

My best wishes to you both.

Deanna Durbin Is Kissed on Screen

In her third consecutive picture, Deanna Durbin is kissed before the cameras. This time, however, it is a real, oldfashioned kiss, delivered on the proper spot with the proper guesto. The performance occurs in Universal's "Spring Parade," the star's latest picture which opens at the New Liberty theater today.

Deanna was screen-kissed for the first time in "First Love." It was a bashful sort of a peck, performed by Robert Stack, who became known as the man who first kissed the young star. That kissing took place a few seasons ago and since that time, Deanna has approached more nearly to full-blossomed young womanhood. In "It's a Date" she was kissed again, this time by Walter Pidgeon, and once again the asculation was on the frigid side, for Walter merely brushed her forehead with his lips.

But this time the man on the firing line in Bob Cummings and the kissing is for keeps.

Barrymore Picture Is Scheduled at Strand

Production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck has backed Barrymore with a supporting cast which includes Mary Beth Hughes, Gregory Ratoff, John Payne, Anne Baxter and Lionel Atwill.

In the film Barrymore portrays a great actor who is given the lead in a play that is about to flop. Giving up, he ad libs his way through, and to everyone's surprise the play becomes a howling success. The film winds up in a funny surprise ending.

The second feature on the program is "The Quarterback", a football frolic starring Wayne Morris, Virginia Dale, Lillian Cornell, and William Frawley.

The Pan American Revue on the stage and "Way of All Flesh" on the screen show today for the last times.

Maureen O'Sullivan Will Be at the Maryland

Maureen O'Sullivan appears with Robert Young in "Sporting Blood," which will be screened Monday at the Maryland theater.

Among her recent pictures are "A Day at the Races," starring the Marx Brothers, "My Dear Miss Aldrich," "A Yank at Oxford," produced at the M-G-M British studios in England; "Port of Seven Seas," "Hold That Kiss," "The Crowd Roars," "Spring Madness," "Let Us Live," "Tarzan Finds a Son" and "Pride and Prejudice."

Rachel Crothers Drama Is Billed at Embassy

Fredric March returns to films to co-star with Joan Crawford in "Susan and God," picturization of the Rachel Crothers stage hit, which opens tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

Also showing at the Embassy are "Main Street Lawyer," Tex Ritter in "The Cowboy from Sundown," Merle O'Beron in "Over the Moon" another chapter of "Terry and the Pirates."

HORSE OWNER

Lewis Stone deserts his celebrated role of Judge Hardy of the Hardy Family series to play the race horse owner in "Sporting Blood," drama of the sport of kings, which opens Monday at the Maryland theater. Robert Young and Maureen O'Sullivan are seen as the lovers of the story, with William Gargan and Lynne Carver in prominent supporting roles.

Two Features Are On Garden Program

Russell Hayden and Britt Wood back him up as the two other members of the famous Bar 20 trio.

The other feature at the Garden is "Fugitive at Large," starring Jack Holt and Patricia Ellis.

Creole Cheese Spread and Salmon Mold Make Ice-Box Snooping Worth While

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

How surprised and delighted are ice box snoopers when they find snooping actually worth while.

Mother, too, enjoys surprising the family by stocking up on extra specials. She guards the family's health cautiously and goes strong on wholesome foods that satisfy and do not bring on bad dreams.

Sandwich spreads are always in demand and this Creole Cheese Spread goes on any kind of bread—white, whole wheat or rye, and try some on hot biscuits, leftover toasted rolls or hot buttered toast.

It's versatile and grand tasting. Keeps well too. Mix together ½ cup each of chopped cooked ham and cheese (yellow, white, cream or cottage), add 1 tablespoon each of chopped pickles, olives and onions. Moisten with salad dressing. Store in a covered jar in the refrigerator.

Salmon mold keeps several days in the refrigerator and can quickly be converted into sandwich filling, salad or merely cold sliced jellied fish. Dissolve a package of lemon flavored gelatin in 1½ cups boiling water. Cool and mix in 1 tablespoons vinegar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper 2 teaspoons granulated sugar and a tablespoon chopped parsley.

Let thicken a little in the refrigerator and then add ½ cup diced celery, 1 cup flaked fish, 2 tablespoons chopped pimientos and 2 tablespoons each of sweet pickles and salad dressing. Congeal in a glass dish and keep in the refrigerator.

Dixie Blend, already to help out sandwich fillings, salad dressing and scrambled eggs, hamburgers or any of the "frank" family, will especially interest the snooper. Mix together in a small fruit jar 1-3 cup each of chili sauce, catsup and salad dressing, add 1 tablespoon each of chopped onions, parsley and dill pickles, 2 teaspoons grated horseradish, 1 teaspoon sugar and 1-3 teaspoon each salt, paprika and celery seed.

Now let's snoop about the pantry

Doughnut Gelatine Dessert

DOUGHNUT GELATINE DESSERT

2 p'kg. cherry gelatine
5 tested quality doughnuts

Dissolve 2 packages gelatine in 1 pint boiling water. Then add 1 pint cold water. Pour just enough gelatine in large round mold to cover bottom. Put in ice box until slightly firm. Press 5 whole doughnuts around outside edge of mold. Allow this to harden. When very firm pour the rest of gelatine over this and allow to harden. When ready to serve dip mold in hot water and turn out quickly on a large plate or platter. Serve at table and cut in triangular pieces. One whole doughnut will be visible in each serving. Serves five.

Here are some Sour Cream Jumbles—soft, creamy cookies that appeal to all ages at all hours of the day and night. (Try some for breakfast with hot coffee or merely as the finale.)

Cream together ½ cup butter and 2 cups granulated sugar. Add ½ cup thick sour cream, 3 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1-3 teaspoon each almond and lemon extracts, ½ teaspoon salt and 1-3 teaspoon nutmeg.

Beat a minute and lightly fold in 3½ cups pastry flour, 1 teaspoon each of baking powder and soda. Drop portions of the dough onto greased baking sheets. Center each cooky with a plump raisin, half a candied cherry or piece of prune. Bake 10 minutes in a moderate oven.

Apricot Hint

Apricots added to stuffing for veal or lamb will make a hit. Put two-third cup chopped cooked apricots in each three cups of bread.

Here Is a New Idea For a Potato Dish

Try this new potato idea: Bake potatoes in the usual way. When they're done, remove and mash the pulp, season it with salt, pepper, minced parsley and onion and a little cream. Beat until light and fluffy then mix in one-third as much mashed cooked carrots as potatoes. Roughly refill the potato cases, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake ten minutes to brown.

Attractive and Refreshing Salads

Watermelon and cantaloupe balls molded in an inch layer of lime gelatin, and then cut into squares makes attractive and refreshing salads. Serve on lettuce or cress and top with mayonnaise. Or cut the gelatin into inch cubes and pile up several for each portion in sherbet cups. Serve as appetizer on dessert. Stick in fresh mint leaves for extra color and flavor.

Frozen Mixtures

When adding fruit or berries to frozen mixtures, see that the fruit is well crushed, mashed, or put through a coarse sieve or food chopper. Large pieces of fruit would freeze in the mixture and not be palatable. Do not add the fruit until the mixture starts to freeez.

A Time Saver

If a recipe calls for beef stock or broth you can substitute a bouillon cube, dissolved in a cup of boiling water. This is a time saver, especially during hot weather.

Batter Will Rise

Never fill muffin pans more than two-thirds full to give space for the batter to rise during the baking period. This also applies to drop cakes baked in muffin pans.

For Lamb Stew

Use sour cream in lamb stew. For two cups of stew mixture add one-third cup thick sour cream. Put it in during the last twenty minutes of the cooking.

Bacon and Waffle Hint

Bacon and waffles are grand when served like this: Place a square of bacon in each section of the waffle iron. Add batter and cook as usual.

Will Kill Yeast

An excess of heat will kill yeast used in making breads. Be sure that any liquid added to the yeast is not too warm.

Crisp autumn days are here again and with them comes the call for sturdied foods. Meals need not be especially rich or expensive, but they should be substantial enough to meet the needs of a more active family.

Baking gets heavier. A fruit nut loaf or raisin bread makes a hit. There will be no late breakfast comers when coffee cake is on the menu. Spicy nut cookies are bound to satisfy extra-hungry kitchen raiders.

Molasses refrigerator cookies are a boon to the busy homemaker. They can be baked as needed and they answer many food calls. Cream 1-2 cup fat with 1 cup brown sugar. Add 1-2 cup granulated sugar, 2 eggs, beaten, 1-2 cup molasses, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, a teaspoon each of cloves, nutmeg and ginger, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup buttermilk and 1-2 cup raisins. Beat thoroughly and mix in 3 1-2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon each of soda and baking powder. Chill the dough. Drop portions of the dough from the tip of a spoon onto greased baking sheets. Bake 10 minutes in a moderate oven.

For a breakfast or luncheon treat here is Cranberry Ring, gay and sprightly and introducing a delicious new flavor. Mix together 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup granulated sugar, 1 egg, 3 tablespoons fat, melted, and 2-3 cup milk. Pour the soft dough into a well greased ring or round pan. Cover lightly with regular cranberry sauce and sprinkle with 1-2 cup dark brown sugar mixed with 2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon and 3 tablespoons butter. Bake 25 minutes in moderate oven.

Nuts put pumpkin pie on a pedestal. Make the filling like this: Mix 1 1-2 cups cooked, mashed pumpkin into 1 cup dark brown sugar, 1-4 cup granulated sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-4 teaspoon each of ginger, mace and nutmeg. Add 1-3 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 3 beaten eggs, 1 cup milk and 1-3 cup broken nuts. Pour into an unbaked pie crust. Bake 10 minutes in a hot oven and 35 minutes in a moderately slow oven. The pie is done when it is quivery in the center. It will thicken as it cools.

Now for those school lunch boxes. A fruit loaf intrigues youngsters because of the delightful flavor. Mix 1-2 cup chopped prunes, 1-3 cup chopped figs and 1-2 cup chopped dates with 1 1-2 cups boiling water. Soak 10 minutes and then fold in 1 cu brown sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 3 tablespoons fat, melted, 2 1-2 cups flour, 1 1-2 teaspoons soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder and 1 cup graham flour. Pour into 2 loaf pans, lined with waxed paper. Let rise 15 minutes and bake an hour in a moderate oven. Cool, wrap in waxed paper and store in the bread box. This bread will keep a week.

New Tea Treat

Here is a new tea treat, dainty and sweet: Lightly butter round crackers, top each with marshmallows, make indentations in the top of each marshmallow and fill with a little jam, jelly or preserved fruit. Bake until the marshmallows are well puffed and the crackers brown. Serve promptly.

PEANUT BUTTER CINNAMON ROLLS

2 cakes compressed yeast
½ cup lukewarm water
¼ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons shortening
1 cup milk, scalded
½ cup peanut butter
5 cups sifted flour (about)
2 eggs, well beaten
⅓ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
Currants

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Add ¼ cup sugar, salt and shortening to scalded milk. Cool to lukewarm, add peanut butter and beat. Add 2 cups flour and beat until smooth. Add yeast and eggs, blending thoroughly. Add flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on slightly floured board and knead until satiny. Place in lightly greased bowl. Brush top with melted shortening, cover, and store in refrigerator. When ready to use, remove dough from refrigerator and let stand in warm room about 1 hour before molding. Turn out on lightly floured board, knead slightly and roll ¼ inch thick. Cream together butter, 1 cup sugar, and cinnamon. Place 1 teaspoon of mixture and ½ teaspoon water in each section of greased muffin pan. Spread dough with remaining butter-sugar mixture and sprinkle with currants. Roll as for jelly roll, sealing edges. Cut in 1-inch slices. Place cut-side down in prepared muffin pans. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk. Bake in moderately hot oven 15 to 20 minutes. Remove from pans at once.

Creole Cheese Spread and Salmon Mold Make Ice-Box Snooping Worth While

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Feature Service Writer

How surprised and delighted are ice box snoopers when they find snooping actually worth while.

Mother, too, enjoys surprising the family by stocking up on extra specials. She guards the family's health cautiously and goes strong on wholesome foods that satisfy and do not bring on bad dreams.

Sandwich spreads are always in demand and this Creole Cheese Spread goes on any kind of bread—white, whole wheat or rye, and try some on hot biscuits, leftover toasted rolls or hot buttered toast.

It's versatile and grand tasting. Keeps well too. Mix together ½ cup each of chopped cooked ham and cheese (yellow, white, cream or cottage), add 1 tablespoon each of chopped pickles, olives and onions. Moisten with salad dressing. Store in a covered jar in the refrigerator.

Salmon mold keeps several days in the refrigerator and can quickly be converted into sandwich filling, salad or merely cold sliced jellied fish. Dissolve a package of lemon flavored gelatin in 1½ cups boiling water. Cool and mix in 1 tablespoons vinegar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper 2 teaspoons granulated sugar and a tablespoon chopped parsley.

Let thicken a little in the refrigerator and then add ½ cup diced celery, 1 cup flaked fish, 2 tablespoons chopped pimientos and 2 tablespoons each of sweet pickles and salad dressing. Congeal in a glass dish and keep in the refrigerator.

Dixie Blend, already to help out sandwich fillings, salad dressing and scrambled eggs, hamburgers or any of the "frank" family, will especially interest the snooper. Mix together in a small fruit jar 1-3 cup each of chili sauce, catsup and salad dressing, add 1 tablespoon each of chopped onions, parsley and dill pickles, 2 teaspoons grated horseradish, 1 teaspoon sugar and 1-3 teaspoon each salt, paprika and celery seed.

Detroit Dynamite Blasts Cincinnati by 7-4

of the long-hitting cannonaders from the junior circuit.

The Reds gave him a run in the first inning when Bill Werber hit the first pitch for two bases and Ival Goodman singled him home.

Turner in Fine Form

Turner faced only ten men in the first three innings, struck out three and once pitched seven successive strikes. He had the Tigers' right-handed power short-circuited apparently hopelessly, although he was having some trouble with the port-siders.

The only hit he gave up in the first three innings was a double by the left-handed hitting Campbell after he had fanned Greenberg and York in succession in the second.

Then in the fourth Detroit tied up the score when McCosky and Gehringer, both left-handed batters, led off with singles and McCosky reached home as Greenberg hit into a double play. York hit a wasted single but the Tigers were routed one after another after that until the big blow-up in the seventh.

Bridges Eases Up

During all this time after the faulty first, Bridges was pitching exactly the same kind of ball, cutting the corners inside and out and giving nothing that looked like a good ball.

Ernie Lombardi, the Reds' injured catcher who started the game in a surprise move by Manager Bill McKechnie and played seven innings led off with a lumbesring double in the second inning and Bridges retired the next 12 batters in order.

In the sixth he gave up his only walk of the game, to Werber, who immediately was aroused trying to steal second. After M. McCormick singled, the slender control specialist who won two games for Detroit in the world series of 1935, snuffed out the Reds one by one until the last two innings, when, with the game won, he relaxed to give the Reds six of their ten hits and three of their runs.

One of these tallies came on singles by Bill Myers, Werber and Mike McCormick, and the other two came in the ninth, one of them being unearned.

Ripple Starts Rally

Jim Ripple, who hit a two-run homer yesterday in Cincinnati to spark the Reds to victory, tried to set off another rally by singling off York's glove at the start of the ninth. Pinky Higgins fumbled a bounder by young Bill Baker, who had relieved Lombardi, and lithe Eddie Joost whacked a single along the ground to center, scoring Ripple and leaving two on base with nobody out.

But Myers whiffed on four pitches and pinch-hitter Lonnie Frey, another Cincinnati cripple, lifted a lazy fly to center. Werber, fighting to the bitter end as usual, singled and Baker beat the throw to the plate. Mike McCormick fanned and the game was over.

While Turner was the principal victim of the Detroit bombardment, giving up eight of the Tigers' hits before turning the tussle over to Whitey Moore, Joe Beggs also was given a going over by the Tigers.

The former Yankee farmhand reported for duty on the mound at the start of the eighth after Moore had been removed for a pinch hitter.

His first batter was Greenberg, who bombed a tremendous triple against the center field wall 415 feet from the plate. York looked at a third strike, but Campbell singled Greenberg home, took second on Mike McCormick's poor return throw, and scored when Higgins lifted a fly that fell a foot or two inside the right field foul line for a double.

Higgins' homer in the seventh and Greenberg's triple were the two most powerfully hit drives of the game. Pinky sent the ball on a line into the upper deck of the left field stands, 340 feet from home plate.

Thompson to Pitch Today

The round tripper by York was an arching fly that fell steeply into the front rows of the same stands, downstairs.

The whole exhibition of power paralleled, if not exceeded, the fireworks set off by the Tigers in the first game at Cincinnati and showed again that Detroit is capable of capturing any contest in one mighty blast if it gets the slightest chance.

Tomorrow McKechnie said he would use young Gene Thompson, a right-hander who has a good fast ball comparable to the offerings that Bucky Walters used in pacifying the Bengals yesterday. This meant that he probably would try again with Paul Derringer on Sunday.

Del Baker, having followed up his plan of using Buck Newsom, Schoolboy Rowe and Bridges in that order, indicated after the game that he might gamble on bespectacled Paul (Dizzy) Trout as a starter in the fourth game although he might return to Newsom. John Gorsica had been he likely choice for this assignment until he had to be rushed to Rowe's relief yesterday.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—It may surprise the Cornell football team to learn that it already has dropped to second place in the Eastern rankings, and inasmuch as Carl Snavely's eleven can toboggan that way without playing a game three probably is some apprehension as to what might happen when it starts its season tomorrow.

The rating is that of the Lambert Trophy committee, which annually awards a cup to the eastern team it considers the most outstanding. Cornell was given the cup last year, and despite Snavely's lost-in-the-woods wailing it generally was considered this year's best bet, as everyone knows that Mr. Snavely wouldn't admit two and three make a full house.

The Lambert system is an innovation in that it gives a team a rating before it has played a game, thereby practically daring the team to prove the rating is wrong.

This guilty-until-proved-innocent idea is based on a number of factors, ranging from experience to morale. The experience can be either happy or sad and the morale high or low, depending upon the circumstances.

Anyway, the first rating is figured on returned veterans, sophomore talent, loss of players through injury or other reasons, reserves, coaching personnel, repertoire of plays, and the morale.

As the season progresses the factor of performance enters the picture, and now we're getting somewhere, as a team might have all the other attributes of success in bushel quantities and yet be just a gymnasium fighter whose playing record was spotted with lost decisions. In such a case all the factors in the rating of the team except that of performance would be just a yell in a barrel so far as meaning anything was concerned.

Boston College was placed at the head of the list for the first week on the basis of its smashing victory over Tulane. The Eagles were given a percentage of .962, two points ahead of Cornell, and that's really drawing a fine line. A rating of 1.000 is considered perfect.

As a further aid to those who might take the rating seriously the committee points out that every 15 points defferential between two teams represents a theoretical touchdown, although it is admitted this is not accurate in cases where there is a wide span between the ratings of the teams.

It's all highly theoretical, as trying to rate a team on past performance is like figuring what Max Baer will do, and trying to rate it without past performance is like looking at a brick and deciding how high a building will be.

Georgetown, Duquesne, Forham and Princeton, in that order, are rated right behind Boston and Cornell, all within a 10-point span.

The system, in addition to providing a method of keeping tab on the teams from week to week, will be used as the basis for awarding the Lambert Trophy, although when it comes right down to that only one factor will enter the picture—the record.

There's still no substitute for success, and if a team wins its games its morale might be scraping bottom and its only play an unclothed reverse and it wouldn't make a particle of difference.

Mountaineers Meet Fordham Today

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—Fordham's Rams from Rose Hill start their rambling quest of National football honors tomorrow when they entertain the tough Mountaineers from West Virginia.

Blessed with a powerful first team but an amazing lack of reserves for the line, Coach Jimmy Crowley decided today to send two sophomores and nine veterans against wily Bill Kerns' club. He named sophomore Steve Filipowicz at fullback and Jim Lansing at right end for the opening fray.

Probable lineups:

Pos.	FORDHAM	WEST VIRGINIA

Canes Play Meyersdale Here Sunday Afternoon

The Cumberland Hurricanes, local colored football team, will play the Meyersdale Blue Devils at Community Park Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

The Meyersdale team is composed of ex-high school players and several members were members of the them which beat Fort Hill in 1938. The Pennsylvanians tied the Windber, Pa., team 0-0 last Sunday. This is the same team which recently defeated the Canes 6 to 0.

Allegany's Jayvees To Oppose LaSalle

The Allegany High junior varsity football aggregation will pry off the season lid today at 1 o'clock by meeting the LaSalle High reserves on the Campobello field.

LaSalle won't be represented by a jayvee outfit this season. The Blue and Gold reserves and jayvee teams from Allegany and Fort Hill will battle it out for the city junior varsity championship.

Next Friday afternoon, Allegany's Blue and White gridders and the Fort Hill junior varsity will tangle on the Campobello field. There are approximately 30 boys on the Allegany squad.

HEROES OF SECOND GAME

Allegany Will Meet Keyser Hi This Afternoon

Campers Are Heavy Favorites To Turn Back the West Virginians

The Allegany high school football eleven will meet Keyser here this afternoon at Fort Hill stadium.

Allegany will be favored to defeat Keyser despite the 34 to 6 shellacking they received last Saturday from Baltimore City College.

The Keyser coach, John Shelton, announced yesterday he would start the same lineup against the Campers as he has been using in previous games. Both Fort Hill and LaSalle defeated Keyser by large scores here.

The visitors will have a light eleven, with the line averaging about 150 pounds and the backfield not more than 130. Only three boys on the squad weigh over 150 pounds.

Fort Hill high will be idle this week-end.

Notes on Third Game of Series

DETROIT, Oct. 4 (AP) — Today's crowd of 52,877 was slow in arriving, except for the 12,000 fans who faced the sun in unreserved sections in center field. They poured in when the gates were opened at 8 a. m. Many reserved seat holders didn't get to their seats until the first inning was over.

Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit club, reached his box about the time the Tigers tied the score at 1-all in the fourth inning.

Ernie Lombardi, big catcher who was out of the Cincinnati lineup with an ankle injury for the first two games, got a nice round of applause from the crowd when his name was announced in the starting lineup today. He responded by lifting a double into the right field corner to open the second inning. Whether Lombardi sees further service in the series is questionable—his ankle was severely swollen after the game.

Jim Turner turned in a neat pitching trick in the second inning, throwing seven successive strikes to Hank Greenberg, Rudy York and Bruce Campbell. Hank looked a bit surprised when he swung at the third one; York watched a waist-high curve go past for his third one; after Campbell took one strike, he watched a ball, then lined a double to left center for the first hit off Turner.

Detroit's run scored by McCosky in the fourth marked the second time in the series that Greenberg had hit into a double play and scored a runner from third.

Greenberg registered a complaint with plate umpire Ballanfant after a called second strike on him in the seventh. Then he smashed a hard ground single to center, starting Detroit's winning rally and scoring ahead of York as the big Cherokee Indian lifted a towering home run past the 350-foot mark into the lower pavilion in left field.

Seventh Inning Tigers

With the count two and two, Greenburg lined a vicious single down the middle of center field.

York looked at one ball, and then drove a tremendous high home run over the left field fence, 350 feet from the plate, scoring Greenberg ahead of him. The crowd roared and threw newspapers and other litter onto the outfield as a dozen or so park attendants sought to clean the field.

Higgins drove the first pitch on a line into the upper deck of the left field stands, slightly to the left of where York's homer hit, and Campbell scored ahead of him.

The crowd again cluttered up the field and an effort was made to clear it while the Reds went into a huddle on the pitching mound.

Team Spirit

Detroit—Jewel Ens, Indianapolis manager and friend of Bill McKechnie who scouted the Tigers for the Reds, sounded an important note connected with this series today—from Cincinnati's angle.

"We all knew about the batting power of the Tiger team," he said. "We knew they could hit. But one of the things that worried us most was the spirit this Detroit team has shown all year. I don't believe anyone ever seen better team spirit. They came along the hard way—and that makes any team tough to take. No matter what the breaks were against them, they kept coming up off the floor. This spirit is something no one can take away from them."

The turns in sport are astonishing. The Giants and the National League in general had decided that Dick Bartell was all washed up. Now Bartell comes back as the spark plug of Detroit's championship team. If he had been a flop this season the Tigers would have gone nowhere at all. Maybe his legs were not what they used to be. But both his head and heart were.

"I've never seen finer spirit on any ball club," Dick told me. "If I had a bad day they were all patting me on the back in the clubhouse just as if I had known a good day. Everybody has been for everybody else. That's what makes a ball club—I mean a winning ball club."

Big Paul Derringer, the Kentucky rifleman, will soon exchange his uniform for a hunting outfit.

"I'm heading for a deer shoot in Wisconsin soon," he said, "and then on to Florida. We'll have the best baseball golf tournament in February that we've ever had. Everything has been arranged for a big show. The pace is getting faster every year."

Hunting and golf are now the main pastimes of big leaguers waiting for another spring. In addition to a pretty fair country pitching arm, Derringer is one of the best with a rifle, a shotgun and a brassie.

"How can you tell what can happen in a world series?" Bill McKechnie asked. "A year ago Paul Derringer should have beaten the Yankees 1 to 0. He had everything. Here is one of the greatest and one of the gamest pitchers I have ever known. He starts off like a blaze against the Tigers. Then suddenly he has nothing. That's baseball. I only wish more people knew what baseball really is.

"Derringer, a great competitor, has never won a world series game. He knew the National League had lost nine straight games. He was keen to win—maybe too keen. He understood in advance that he was our main hope. I mean in that opener. There was no critical spot. But he lost all his stuff. I only wish more people would understand how many great athletes had come across the same fate.

I talked with Ford Frick, president of the National League.

"This is one series we just have to win," he said.

The answer is that the National League must rebuild if they can't win this time. The National League has taken too many beatings. It can't afford another.

Dodgers Beat Eagles

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — The Brooklyn Dodgers tonight found the answer to the threat of Davy O'Brien's passing, sweeping to a 30-17 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles before 24,008 at Ebbets Field. The Dodgers allowed neither O'Brien nor his teammates to handle the ball long enough for a sustained offensive drive.

LaSalle Eleven And St. Francis Battle to Tie

North Enders Threaten Several Times but Fumbles Hurt Chances

Fumblitis, football's most dreaded disease, struck the grid forces of LaSalle last night at Fort Hill Stadium against St. Francis High of Morgantown (W. Va.), for the second time in as many weeks and caused the Green Hornets of North End to be content with another scoreless tie. Last week the North Enders battled Altonna (Pa.) Catholic to a stalemate in the Pennsylvania city.

Coach "Pat" Conway's eleven clearly outplayed the visitors as evidenced by the statistics which gave the locals a big advantage in yards from scrimmage and first downs, but whenever in sight of the payoff station, either a fumble or intercepted pass halted the march.

LaSalle racked up 12 first downs to seven for the Trojans and piled up 208 yards on running plays as compared to 90 for the losers.

The Green Wave missed a golden opportunity to score midway in the third stanza when Bill "Lefty" Smith allowed "Penny" Shaffer's long pass slip through his fingers on the St. Francis 20 with a clear field ahead of him. And then in the last quarter the Centre street boys pushed their way to the Trojan 10, only to lose the leather on an interception.

Hornets Stopped

Following St. Francis' try within the oval, the Hornets again took possession on their own 39 and marched down to the invaders 15 where a fourth-down plunge fell short of a first. After St. Francis failed to gain and kicked, the Cowaymen moved to the 20-yard line on a beautifully-executed pass play but the game ended with this play.

Bill Cavanaugh was the Hornets' most consistent ground gainer, as had it not been for a dreadful choice of plays by the LaSalle signal barker, the hard-driving fullback probably would have planted the oval in the St. Francis end zone.

Cavanaugh ripped through the Morgantown line for nice gains during the fourth-quarter spree carrying the Blue and Gold within striking distance of the goal. But it was here that the other LaSalle backs ran the ball without gaining.

Frank Trovato, right end for the Trojans, stopped one of LaSalle's marches in the final heat when with the ball resting on the St. Francis 10, he shot through the LaSalle forward wall like a bullet and smeared Cavanaugh for an eight-yard loss, the only time the LaSalle fullback was stopped. It was immediately after this play that St. Francis intercepted "Vic" Malloy's pass on its own five.

LaSalle on March

Each team made two first downs in the first frame but LaSalle registered three in the ensuing stanza to one for the Trojans. St. Francis outplayed the North Enders in the third session, gaining three first downs one, and making 30 yards on running plays to 15. The final quarter was all LaSalle, statistics giving the Hornets 85 yards to seven and showing the sticks moving six times to one.

LaSalle completed three of nine passes for 24 yards, with five falling incomplete and one being intercepted. The Trojans clicked on two of six attempts by the air for 33 yards, both of the completions being good for first downs. LaSalle was set back 20 yards on penalties while the visitors lost 15. Detroit Dynamite Blasts Cincinnati by 7-4 of the long-hitting cannonaders from the junior circuit.

The Reds gave him a run in the first inning when Bill Werber hit the first pitch for two bases and Ival Goodman singled him home.

Turner in Fine Form

Turner faced only ten men in the first three innings, struck out three and once pitched seven successive strikes. He had the Tigers' right-handed power short-circuited apparently hopelessly, although he was having some trouble with the portsiders.

The only hit he gave up in the first three innings was a double by the left-handed hitting Campbell after he had fanned Greenberg and York in succession in the second.

Then in the fourth Detroit tied up the score when McCosky and Gehringer, both left-handed batters, led off with singles and McCosky reached home as Greenberg hit into a double play. York hit a wasted single but the Tigers were routed one after another after that until the big blow-up in the seventh.

Bridges Eases Up

During all this time after the faulty first, Bridges was pitching exactly the same kind of ball, cutting the corners inside and out and giving nothing that looked like a good ball.

Ernie Lombardi, the Reds' injured catcher who started the game in a surprise move by Manager Bill McKechnie and played seven innings led off with a lumbering double in the second inning and Bridges retired the next 12 batters in order.

In the sixth he gave up his only walk of the game, to Werber, who immediately was aroused trying to steal second. After M. McCormick singled, the slender control specialist who won two games for Detroit in the world series of 1935, snuffed out the Reds one by one until the last two innings, when, with the game won, he relaxed to give the Reds six of their ten hits and three of their runs.

One of these tallies came on singles by Bill Myers, Werber and Mike McCormick, and the other two came in the ninth, one of them being unearned.

Ripple Starts Rally

Jim Ripple, who hit a two-run homer yesterday in Cincinnati to spark the Reds to victory, tried to set off another rally by singling off York's glove at the start of the ninth. Pinky Higgins fumbled a bounder by young Bill Baker, who had relieved Lombardi, and lithe Eddie Joost whacked a single along the ground to center, scoring Ripple and leaving two on base with nobody out.

But Myers whiffed on four pitches and pinch-hitter Lonnie Frey, another Cincinnati cripple, lifted a lazy fly to center. Werber, fighting to the bitter end as usual, singled and Baker beat the throw to the plate. Mike McCormick fanned and the game was over.

While Turner was the principal victim of the Detroit bombardment, giving up eight of the Tigers' hits before turning the tussle over to Whitey Moore, Joe Beggs also was given a going over by the Tigers.

The former Yankee farmhand reported for duty on the mound at the start of the eighth after Moore had been removed for a pinch hitter.

His first batter was Greenberg, who bombed a tremendous triple against the center field wall 415 feet from the plate. York looked at a third strike, but Campbell singled Greenberg home, took second on Mike McCormick's poor return throw, and scored when Higgins lifted a fly that fell a foot or two inside the right field foul line for a double.

Thompson to Pitch Today

The round tripper by York was an arching fly that fell steeply into the front rows of the same stands, downstairs.

The whole exhibition of power paralleled, if not exceeded, the fireworks set off by the Tigers in the first game at Cincinnati and showed again that Detroit is capable of capturing any contest in one mighty blast if it gets the slightest chance.

Tomorrow McKechnie said he would use young Gene Thompson, a right-hander who has a good fast ball comparable to the offerings that Bucky Walters used in pacifying the Bengals yesterday. This meant that he probably would try again with Paul Derringer on Sunday.

Del Baker, having followed up his plan of using Buck Newsom, Schoolboy Rowe and Bridges in that order, indicated after the game that he might gamble on bespectacled Paul (Dizzy) Trout as a starter in the fourth game although he might return to Newsom. John Gorsica had been the likely choice for this assignment until he had to be rushed to Rowe's relief yesterday.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—It may surprise the Cornell football team to learn that it already has dropped to second place in the Eastern rankings, and inasmuch as Carl Snavely's eleven can toboggan that way without playing a game three probably is some apprehension as to what might happen when it starts its season tomorrow.

The rating is that of the Lambert Trophy committee, which annually awards a cup to the eastern team it considers the most outstanding. Cornell was given the cup last year, and despite Snavely's lost-in-the-woods wailing it generally was considered this year's best bet, as everyone knows that Mr. Snavely wouldn't admit two and three make a full house.

The Lambert system is an innovation in that it gives a team a rating before it has played a game, thereby practically daring the team to prove the rating is wrong.

This guilty-until-proved-innocent idea is based on a number of factors, ranging from experience to morale. The experience can be either happy or sad and the morale high or low, depending upon the circumstances.

Anyway, the first rating is figured on returned veterans, sophomore talent, loss of players through injury or other reasons, reserves, coaching personnel, repertoire of plays, and the morale.

As the season progresses the factor of performance enters the picture, and now we're getting somewhere, as a team might have all the other attributes of success in bushel quantities and yet be just a gymnasium fighter whose playing record was spotted with lost decisions. In such a case all the factors in the rating of the team except that of performance would be just a yell in a barrel so far as meaning anything was concerned.

Boston College was placed at the head of the list for the first week on the basis of its smashing victory over Tulane. The Eagles were given a percentage of .962, two points ahead of Cornell, and that's really drawing a fine line. A rating of 1.000 is considered perfect.

As a further aid to those who might take the rating seriously the committee points out that every 15 points defferential between two teams represents a theoretical touchdown, although it is admitted this is not accurate in cases where there is a wide span between the ratings of the teams.

It's all highly theoretical, as trying to rate a team on past performance is like figuring what Max Baer will do, and trying to rate it without past performance is like looking at a brick and deciding how high a building will be.

Georgetown, Duquesne, Forham and Princeton, in that order, are rated right behind Boston and Cornell, all within a 10-point span.

The system, in addition to providing a method of keeping tab on the teams from week to week, will be used as the basis for awarding the Lambert Trophy, although when it comes right down to that only one factor will enter the picture—the record.

There's still no substitute for success, and if a team wins its games its morale might be scraping bottom and its only play an unclothed reverse and it wouldn't make a particle of difference.

Mountaineers Meet Fordham Today

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—Fordham's Rams from Rose Hill start their rambling quest of National football honors tomorrow when they entertain the tough Mountaineers from West Virginia.

Blessed with a powerful first team but an amazing lack of reserves for the line, Coach Jimmy Crowley decided today to send two sophomores and nine veterans against wily Bill Kerns' club. He named sophomore Steve Filipowicz at fullback and Jim Lansing at right end for the opening fray.

Probable lineups:

Pos.	FORDHAM	WEST VIRGINIA

Canes Play Meyersdale Here Sunday Afternoon

The Cumberland Hurricanes, local colored football team, will play the Meyersdale Blue Devils at Community Park Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

The Meyersdale team is composed of ex-high school players and several members were members of the them which beat Fort Hill in 1938. The Pennsylvanians tied the Windber, Pa., team 0-0 last Sunday. This is the same team which recently defeated the Canes 6 to 0.

Allegany's Jayvees To Oppose LaSalle

The Allegany High junior varsity football aggregation will pry off the season lid today at 1 o'clock by meeting the LaSalle High reserves on the Campobello field.

LaSalle won't be represented by a jayvee outfit this season. The Blue and Gold reserves and jayvee teams from Allegany and Fort Hill will battle it out for the city junior varsity championship.

Next Friday afternoon, Allegany's Blue and White gridders and the Fort Hill junior varsity will tangle on the Campobello field. There are approximately 30 boys on the Allegany squad.

HEROES OF SECOND GAME

Allegany Will Meet Keyser Hi This Afternoon

Campers Are Heavy Favorites To Turn Back the West Virginians

The Allegany high school football eleven will meet Keyser here this afternoon at Fort Hill stadium.

Allegany will be favored to defeat Keyser despite the 34 to 6 shellacking they received last Saturday from Baltimore City College.

The Keyser coach, John Shelton, announced yesterday he would start the same lineup against the Campers as he has been using in previous games. Both Fort Hill and LaSalle defeated Keyser by large scores here.

The visitors will have a light eleven, with the line averaging about 150 pounds and the backfield not more than 130. Only three boys on the squad weigh over 150 pounds.

Fort Hill high will be idle this week-end.

Notes on Third Game of Series

DETROIT, Oct. 4 (AP) — Today's crowd of 52,877 was slow in arriving, except for the 12,000 fans who faced the sun in unreserved sections in center field. They poured in when the gates were opened at 8 a. m. Many reserved seat holders didn't get to their seats until the first inning was over.

Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit club, reached his box about the time the Tigers tied the score at 1-all in the fourth inning.

Ernie Lombardi, big catcher who was out of the Cincinnati lineup with an ankle injury for the first two games, got a nice round of applause from the crowd when his name was announced in the starting lineup today. He responded by lifting a double into the right field corner to open the second inning. Whether Lombardi sees further service in the series is questionable—his ankle was severely swollen after the game.

Jim Turner turned in a neat pitching trick in the second inning, throwing seven successive strikes to Hank Greenberg, Rudy York and Bruce Campbell. Hank looked a bit surprised when he swung at the third one; York watched a waist-high curve go past for his third one; after Campbell took one strike, he watched a ball, then lined a double to left center for the first hit off Turner.

Detroit's run scored by McCosky in the fourth marked the second time in the series that Greenberg had hit into a double play and scored a runner from third.

Greenberg registered a complaint with plate umpire Ballanfant after a called second strike on him in the seventh. Then he smashed a hard ground single to center, starting Detroit's winning rally and scoring ahead of York as the big Cherokee Indian lifted a towering home run past the 350-foot mark into the lower pavilion in left field.

Seventh Inning Tigers

With the count two and two, Greenburg lined a vicious single down the middle of center field.

York looked at one ball, and then drove a tremendous high home run over the left field fence, 350 feet from the plate, scoring Greenberg ahead of him. The crowd roared and threw newspapers and other litter onto the outfield as a dozen or so park attendants sought to clean the field.

Higgins drove the first pitch on a line into the upper deck of the left field stands, slightly to the left of where York's homer hit, and Campbell scored ahead of him.

The crowd again cluttered up the field and an effort was made to clear it while the Reds went into a huddle on the pitching mound.

Team Spirit

Detroit—Jewel Ens, Indianapolis manager and friend of Bill McKechnie who scouted the Tigers for the Reds, sounded an important note connected with this series today—from Cincinnati's angle.

"We all knew about the batting power of the Tiger team," he said. "We knew they could hit. But one of the things that worried us most was the spirit this Detroit team has shown all year. I don't believe anyone ever seen better team spirit. They came along the hard way—and that makes any team tough to take. No matter what the breaks were against them, they kept coming up off the floor. This spirit is something no one can take away from them."

The turns in sport are astonishing. The Giants and the National League in general had decided that Dick Bartell was all washed up. Now Bartell comes back as the spark plug of Detroit's championship team. If he had been a flop this season the Tigers would have gone nowhere at all. Maybe his legs were not what they used to be. But both his head and heart were.

"I've never seen finer spirit on any ball club," Dick told me. "If I had a bad day they were all patting me on the back in the clubhouse just as if I had known a good day. Everybody has been for everybody else. That's what makes a ball club—I mean a winning ball club."

Big Paul Derringer, the Kentucky rifleman, will soon exchange his uniform for a hunting outfit.

"I'm heading for a deer shoot in Wisconsin soon," he said, "and then on to Florida. We'll have the best baseball golf tournament in February that we've ever had. Everything has been arranged for a big show. The pace is getting faster every year."

Hunting and golf are now the main pastimes of big leaguers waiting for another spring. In addition to a pretty fair country pitching arm, Derringer is one of the best with a rifle, a shotgun and a brassie.

"How can you tell what can happen in a world series?" Bill McKechnie asked. "A year ago Paul Derringer should have beaten the Yankees 1 to 0. He had everything. Here is one of the greatest and one of the gamest pitchers I have ever known. He starts off like a blaze against the Tigers. Then suddenly he has nothing. That's baseball. I only wish more people knew what baseball really is.

"Derringer, a great competitor, has never won a world series game. He knew the National League had lost nine straight games. He was keen to win—maybe too keen. He understood in advance that he was our main hope. I mean in that opener. There was no critical spot. But he lost all his stuff. I only wish more people would understand how many great athletes had come across the same fate.

I talked with Ford Frick, president of the National League.

"This is one series we just have to win," he said.

The answer is that the National League must rebuild if they can't win this time. The National League has taken too many beatings. It can't afford another.

Dodgers Beat Eagles

LaSalle Eleven And St. Francis Battle to Tie

North Enders Threaten Several Times but Fumbles Hurt Chances

Fumblitis, football's most dreaded disease, struck the grid forces of LaSalle last night at Fort Hill Stadium against St. Francis Prep of Morgantown (W. Va.), for the second time in as many weeks and caused the Green Hornets of North End to be content with another scoreless tie. Last week the North Enders battled Altonna (Pa.) Catholic to a stalemate in the Pennsylvania city.

Coach "Pat" Conway's eleven clearly outplayed the visitors as evidenced by the statistics which gave the locals a big advantage in yards from scrimmage and first downs, but whenever in sight of the payoff station, either a fumble or intercepted pass halted the march.

LaSalle racked up 12 first downs to seven for the Trojans and piled up 208 yards on running plays as compared to 90 for the losers.

The Green Wave missed a golden opportunity to score midway in the third stanza when Bill "Lefty" Smith allowed "Penny" Shaffer's long pass slip through his fingers on the St. Francis 20 with a clear field ahead of him. And then in the last quarter the Centre sophs boys pushed their way to the Trojan 10, only to lose the leather on an interception.

Hornets Stopped

Following St. Francis' try within the oval, the Hornets again took possession on their own 39 and marched down to the invaders 10 where a fourth-down plunge fell short of a first. After St. Francis failed to gain and kicked, the Conewaymen moved to the 20-yard line on a beautifully-executed pass play but the game ended with this play.

Bill Cavanaugh was the Hornets' most consistent ground gainer, and had it not been for a dreadful choice of plays by the LaSalle signal barker, the hard-driving fullback probably would have planted the oval in the St. Francis end zone.

Cavanaugh ripped through the Morgantown line for nice gains during the fourth-quarter spurt carrying the Blue and Gold within striking distance of the goal. But it was here that the other LaSalle backs ran the ball without gaining.

Frank Trovato, right end for the Trojans, stopped one of LaSalle's marches in the final heat when with the ball resting on the St. Francis 10, he shot through the LaSalle forward wall like a bullet and smeared Cavanaugh for an eight-yard loss, the only time the LaSalle fullback was stopped. It was immediately after this play that St. Francis intercepted "Vic" Malloy's pass on its own five.

LaSalle on March

Each team made two first downs in the first frame but LaSalle registered three in the ensuing stanza to one for the Trojans. St. Francis outplayed the North Enders in the third session, gaining three first to one, and making 30 yards on running plays to 15. The final quarter was all LaSalle, statistics giving the Hornets 85 yards to seven and showing the sticks moving six times to one.

LaSalle completed three of nine passes for 24 yards, with five failing incomplete and one being intercepted. The Trojans clicked on two of six attempts by the air for 31 yards, both of the completions being good for first downs. LaSalle was set back 20 yards on penalties while the visitors lost 15. Duke and Tennessee Top Football Schedule

Winner Is Likely To Have Perfect Record This Year

Stagg's Eleven To Meet Irish of Notre Dame at South Bend

By BILL BONI

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — Tomorrow is only the first October Saturday, but it is likely to be peculiarly decisive in the college football season.

Chiefly, it will feature the meeting at Knoxville of Duke and Tennessee, favorites in their respective conferences. The winner is likely to go on to a perfect season.

But as corollary attractions there are such events as:

The unveiling in the East of Cornell, sectional kingpin last year, and of Princeton, touted as the Big Red's main Ivy League threat; of Fordham, expected to battle Boston College for non-Ivy honors in the East; of Northwestern's Bill De Correvont, who will make his bow as a seasoned junior against Syracuse.

Homecoming for Stagg

The Mid-West homecoming of Amos Alonzo Stagg, who brings his College of the Pacific crew into South Bend to open a promising Notre Dame team's campaign; Minnesota's second successive chance to knock off the potential leader of outside conference, Nebraska; high-geared Ohio State's first big ten engagement, with fast but outweighed Purdue.

Opportunities, in Dixie, for Tulane and Louisiana State to bounce back against Auburn and Holy Cross, respectively, from defeats suffered last week.

On the West Coast, a tough battle with Oregon State for Southern California's Trojans, hoping to prove that tie with Washington State was all a horrible mistake.

Realizing that even a poor average is better than none at all, this big-game hunter fills both barrels with bird-shot in the hope of hitting something and offers the following predictions (probable attendance in parentheses):

Duke Battles Tennessee

Tennessee-Duke (40,000). Why couldn't they have waited until later in the season? . . . But he who hesitates is lost, so—Duke.

Minnesota-Nebraska (45,000)—The wear and tear in this one should be terrific. We'll take Minnesota.

Cornell-Colgate (16,000)—Mindful of last year's close call, the Ithacans are likely to take no chances. Cornell.

Texas Christian-Arkansas (15,000) —The Southwest race is wideopen, but in this inaugural it should be T.C.U.

Tulane-Auburn (35,000)—Looking for the Green Wave to roll back to victory. Tulane.

Southern California-Oregon State (50,000)—Southern California, but no money-back guarantee.

Life Is Terribly Tough For Tebbetts This Week

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

DETROIT, Oct. 4. — When you watch Mr. Birdie Tebbetts perform in this World Series, remember that he is a fellow with something on his mind. Mr. Tebbetts is the central character in the sensational case of who flung the crate of tomatoes and bottles with malice afore-thought in statu quo.

Practically every day in this World Series, Mr. Tebbetts crouches behind the plate and catches to the best of his ability. The best of his ability is very good. The pitchers like to throw to Mr. Tebbetts. He is smart and agile by disposition. But the pitchers all agree that life is tough for Mr. Tebbetts this week, and they do not blame him if he calls for a fast one now and then when a curve might be made to order. After all, his mind is bound to be occupied, up to fifteen per cent, with the case of who flung the crate of tomatoes and bottles.

J. Edgar Hoover is hot on the trail in this case. Sherlock Holmes has broken his violin across his knee, put his cocaine away in the medicine chest, and is concentrating on nothing else. It's not often that you find a World Series catcher defending a lawsuit and catching Schoolboy Rowe at one and the same time.

Don't Like Tebbetts Alive

You probably recall that in the crucial Detroit-Cleveland series last week, when the Tigers won the American League pennant, feeling ran high, way up in the soprano register.

Mr. Tebbetts was in the bullpen at Cleveland, and a citizen of that hospitable hamlet, reasoning that no good could come of Tebbetts alive, sought to adjust this detail by dropping a crate upon Birdie's busy noodle from a seat just above the bullpen.

He reached the green with his tee shot. In other words, the crate contacted Mr. Tebbetts, and the citizen evaporated in the direction of the city hall, where he no doubt planned to put himself in nomination for president.

There is some question as to what the crate contained. I have talked to several eyewitnesses, and also have heard Mr. Tebbetts on the subject. Mr. Tebbetts says he does not know, though he suspects the missile contained a consignment of rare old Cleveland scrap iron. In the language of love (see J. B. Follansbee, what the flowers mean, Vol. 2, chapter VII), this is tantamount to a proposal of marriage.

If you believe the eyewitnesses, the box was loaded with equal portions of the following:

(A) Fresh tomatoes.

(B) Long island potatoes.

(C) Choice of two eggs, any style.

(D) Miscellaneous glassware.

It's All A Blank

The crux of the matter occurred when the police, having collared a gentleman whom they suspected of this and that in their enthusiastic way, led him up to Mr. Tebbetts. Seized by a fit of generous choler, Mr. Tebbetts is said to have wound up and let the stooge have it where Jenny wore the pearls.

"I do not know," stated Mr. Tebbetts today, while tearing a tongue sandwich limb from limb, "exactly what happened. Maybe I hit somebody, maybe I didn't. It is all a blank to me, friends."

Nevertheless, Mr. Tebbetts is being sued from port and starboard, and the World Series of 1940 is notable up to date for the quantity of lawyers, barristers, solicitors, attorneys' counsellors and ambulance-pursuers who sit back of third base, rehearsing their remarks to the jury.

They focus their gaze upon Mr. Tebbetts, and Birdie is naturally flustered, knowing that if he is not guilty of barratry in fee simple, he is undoubtedly open to a charge of malfeasance in the fourth degree, de plus ultra.

I am proud to say that this has the minimum effect on his catching. His pitchers say that he is in there giving of his best, and if they lose the series, it will not be Birdie's fault.

Mr. Derringer, of the enemy Reds, should be full of sympathy for the last of the Tebbettses. There was a time when Mr. Derringer, having socked a civvian in the whiskers in a moment of whimsy, was sued with such violence that he could not set foot in New York state until the parties got together out of court.

It is getting so that you cannot be too careful whom you slug nowadays.

But it never happened before to a World Series player, on the eve of a series. If it did, get in touch with Mr. Tebbetts, and tell him who won, and by how much, in fee simple.

Delicatets Win Two Trophies in South End League

Defeat Liberty at Taylor Field 9 to 2 in Batting Spree

Lacy Delicatets won both championship trophies of the South End Boosters League by defeating Liberty Dairy yesterday at Taylor field 9 to 2 in a free batting spree.

The Delicatets were unstoppable putting on a fine display of hitting and running. Thursday the Delicatets ran up a 3 to 0 lead on the Dairyman by playing the first three complete innings in order to be able to complete the game today before darkness.

In the first inning Bee Orndoff hit a single through second base, went to second on Abe's sacrifice and scored on Herman Athey's single to short field. Athey scored on Penner's home run to deep right. Scaletta pitched to ten batters in the first three innings Thursday. He passed one, struckout four.

Yesterday Scaletta started where he left off Thursday by striking out the first man, the next two flied out. Then the fireworks started when W. Yaider, first man up for Lacy's, hit a single. Penner, Sarver, W. Orndoff, Crabtree and J. Yaider followed suit all with clean singles. Scaletta's line drive was knocked down by Mertens and the lanky star was credited with an error and Bee Orndoff's single drove Knieriem off the mound.

With none out and bases loaded "Russ" Minnicks came in to pitch and tossed them up to the next two batters, the first popped a fly to left and a man was nipped at third for a double play, the next batter flied to deep short field for the final out. Sarver's double was the only hit off Minnicks, but the Delicatets already had the game in the bag.

Scaletta scattered four hits to the Dairymen, one of which Mertens drove out of the park for a homer and struck out six men.

Duke and Tennessee Top Football Schedule

Winner Is Likely To Have Perfect Record This Year

By BILL BONI

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP) — Tomorrow is only the first October Saturday, but it is likely to be peculiarly decisive in the college football season.

Chiefly, it will feature the meeting at Knoxville of Duke and Tennessee, favorites in their respective conferences. The winner is likely to go on to a perfect season.

But as corollary attractions there are such events as:

The unveiling in the East of Cornell, sectional kingpin last year, and of Princeton, touted as the Big Red's main Ivy League threat; of Fordham, expected to battle Boston College for non-Ivy honors in the East; of Northwestern's Bill De Correvont, who will make his bow as a seasoned junior against Syracuse.

Homecoming for Stagg

The Mid-West homecoming of Amos Alonzo Stagg, who brings his College of the Pacific crew into South Bend to open a promising Notre Dame team's campaign; Minnesota's second successive chance to knock off the potential leader of outside conference, Nebraska; high-geared Ohio State's first big ten engagement, with fast but outweighed Purdue.

Opportunities in Dixie, for Tulane and Louisiana State to bounce back against Auburn and Holy Cross, respectively, from defeats suffered last week.

On the West Coast, a tough battle with Oregon State for Southern California's Trojans, hoping to prove that tie with Washington State was all a horrible mistake.

Realizing that even a poor average is better than none at all, this big-game hunter fills both barrels with bird-shot in the hope of hitting something and offers the following predictions (probable attendance in parentheses):

Duke Battles Tennessee

Tennessee-Duke (40,000). Why couldn't they have waited until later in the season? . . . But he who hesitates is lost, so—Duke.

Minnesota-Nebraska (45,000)—The wear and tear in this one should be terrific. We'll take Minnesota.

Cornell-Colgate (16,000)—Mindful of last year's close call, the Ithacans are likely to take no chances. Cornell.

Texas Christian-Arkansas (15,000) —The Southwest race is wideopen, but in this inaugural it should be T.C.U.

Tulane-Auburn (35,000)—Looking for the Green Wave to roll back to victory. Tulane.

Southern California-Oregon State (50,000)—Southern California, but no money-back guarantee.

Syracuse-Northwestern (23,000)—With Don Clawson to help De Correvont, Northwestern is our pick.

Ohio State-Purdue (45,000)—Purdue is smaller and faster, which might go anywhere but here. Ohio State.

Fordham-West Virginia (15,000)—Fordham—Despite the "sleeper stories about the Mountaineers.

Indiana-Texas (18,000)—It seems just about time for Dana Bible to have the Longhorns primed. Texas.

Pitt Over Missouri

Pitt-Missouri (30,000)—The Tiger defense hardly appears rock-ribbed Cracum to crack 'em for Pitt.

Michigan-Michigan State (60,000) —Already they're talking of overconfidence at Ann Arbor. The Spartans should take care of that, but we don't think they'll whip Harmon and Co. Michigan.

Louisiana State-Holy Cross (30,000)—This business gets no easier. With a blindfold, L.S.U.

Yale-Virginia (30,000) — Taking Virginia to surprise.

Notre Dame-Pacific (40,000)—The Irish in a prelude to tougher jobs to come.

Princeton—Vanderbilt (12,000) — Princeton.

California-St. Mary's (40,000)—They say Slip Madigan left behind lots of material. St. Mary's.

Stanford-Oregon (30,000) — Stanford.

Marquette - Wisconsin (30,000)—Marquette, on a hunch.

Here 'n' there elsewhere:

East—Army over Williams, Navy over Cincinnati, New York U. over Lafayette, Penn State over Bucknell.

Mid-West—Iowa State over Kansas, Kansas State over Colorado, Oklahoma over Oklahoma Aggies.

Southwest — Southern Methodist over No. Texas Teachers.

Far West and Rockies—Washington over Idaho, Washington State over Montana, Utah over Brigham Young.

Life Is Terribly Tough For Tebbetts This Week

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

By JOHN LARDNER

DETROIT, Oct. 4. — When you watch Mr. Birdie Tebbetts perform in this World Series, remember that he is a fellow with something on his mind. Mr. Tebbetts is the central character in the sensational case of who flung the crate of tomatoes and bottles with malice afore-thought in statu quo.

Practically every day in this World Series, Mr. Tebbetts crouches behind the plate and catches to the best of his ability. The best of his ability is very good. The pitchers like to throw to Mr. Tebbetts. He is smart and agile by disposition. But the pitchers all agree that life is tough for Mr. Tebbetts this week, and they do not blame him if he calls for a fast one now and then when a curve might be made to order. After all, his mind is bound to be occupied, up to fifteen per cent, with the case of who flung the crate of tomatoes and bottles.

J. Edgar Hoover is hot on the trail in this case. Sherlock Holmes has broken his violin across his knee, put his cocaine away in the medicine chest, and is concentrating on nothing else. It's not often that you find a World Series catcher defending a lawsuit and catching Schoolboy Rowe at one and the same time.

Don't Like Tebbetts Alive

You probably recall that in the crucial Detroit-Cleveland series last week, when the Tigers won the American League pennant, feeling ran high, way up in the soprano register.

Mr. Tebbetts was in the bullpen at Cleveland, and a citizen of that hospitable hamlet, reasoning that no good could come of Tebbetts alive, sought to adjust this detail by dropping a crate upon Birdie's busy noodle from a seat just above the bullpen.

He reached the green with his tee shot. In other words, the crate contacted Mr. Tebbetts, and the citizen evaporated in the direction of the city hall, where he no doubt planned to put himself in nomination for president.

There is some question as to what the crate contained. I have talked to several eyewitnesses, and also have heard Mr. Tebbetts on the subject. Mr. Tebbetts says he does not know, though he suspects the missile contained a consignment of rare old Cleveland scrap iron. In the language of love (see J. B. Follansbee, what the flowers mean, Vol. 2, chapter VII), this is tantamount to a proposal of marriage.

If you believe the eyewitnesses, the box was loaded with equal portions of the following:

(A) Fresh tomatoes.

(B) Long island potatoes.

(C) Choice of two eggs, any style.

(D) Miscellaneous glassware.

It's All A Blank

The crux of the matter occurred when the police, having collared a gentleman whom they suspected of this and that in their enthusiastic way, led him up to Mr. Tebbetts. Seized by a fit of generous choler, Mr. Tebbetts is said to have wound up and let the stooge have it where Jenny wore the pearls.

"I do not know," stated Mr. Tebbetts today, while tearing a tongue sandwich limb from limb, "exactly what happened. Maybe I hit somebody, maybe I didn't. It is all a blank to me, friends."

Nevertheless, Mr. Tebbetts is being sued from port and starboard, and the World Series of 1940 is notable up to date for the quantity of lawyers, barristers, solicitors, attorneys' counsellors and ambulance-pursuers who sit back of third base, rehearsing their remarks to the jury.

They focus their gaze upon Mr. Tebbetts, and Birdie is naturally flustered, knowing that if he is not guilty of barratry in fee simple, he is undoubtedly open to a charge of malfeasance in the fourth degree, de plus ultra.

I am proud to say that this has the minimum effect on his catching. His pitchers say that he is in there giving of his best, and if they lose the series, it will not be Birdie's fault.

Mr. Derringer, of the enemy Reds, should be full of sympathy for the last of the Tebbettses. There was a time when Mr. Derringer, having socked a civilian in the whiskers in a moment of whimsy, was sued with such violence that he could not set foot in New York state until the parties got together out of court.

It is getting so that you cannot be too careful whom you slug nowadays.

But it never happened before to a World Series player, on the eve of a series. If it did, get in touch with Mr. Tebbetts, and tell him who won, and by how much, in fee simple.

Delicatets Win Two Trophies in South End League

Defeat Liberty at Taylor Field 9 to 2 in Batting Spree

Lacy Delicatets won both championship trophies of the South End Boosters League by defeating Liberty Dairy yesterday at Taylor field 9 to 2 in a free batting spree.

The Delicatets were unstoppable putting on a fine display of hitting and running. Thursday the Delicatets ran up a 3 to 0 lead on the Dairyman by playing the first three complete innings in order to be able to complete the game today before darkness.

In the first inning Bee Orndoff hit a single through second base, went to second on Abe's sacrifice and scored on Herman Athey's single to short field. Athey scored on Penner's home run to deep right. Scaletta pitched to ten batters in the first three innings Thursday. He passed one, struckout four.

Yesterday Scaletta started where he left off Thursday by striking out the first man, the next two flied out. Then the fireworks started when W. Yaider, first man up for Lacy's, hit a single. Penner, Sarver, W. Orndoff, Crabtree and J. Yaider followed suit all with clean singles. Scaletta's line drive was knocked down by Mertens and the lanky star was credited with an error and Bee Orndoff's single drove Knieriem off the mound.

With none out and bases loaded "Russ" Minnicks came in to pitch and tossed them up to the next two batters, the first popped a fly to left and a man was nipped at third for a double play, the next batter flied to deep short field for the final out. Sarver's double was the only hit off Minnicks, but the Delicatets already had the game in the bag.

Scaletta scattered four hits to the Dairymen, one of which Mertens drove out of the park for a homer and struck out six men.

YOU KNOW IT SELLS

The selling ability of newspaper advertising is demonstrated daily. No other medium produces crowds and makes sales like newspapers. If an advertiser wants sales there should be no doubt in his mind about the type advertising he should use.

Your advertising problem may be different but the primary purpose of all advertising is to sell and no medium sells like newspapers. Regardless of what you have to sell, News-Times advertising, if used consistently assures you of maximum results.

YOU KNOW IT SELLS

The selling ability of newspaper advertising is demonstrated daily. No other medium produces crowds and makes sales like newspapers. If an advertiser wants sales there should be no doubt in his mind about the type advertising he should use.

Your advertising problem may be different but the primary purpose of all advertising is to sell, and no medium sells like newspapers. Regardless of what you have to sell, News-Times advertising, if used consistently, assures you of maximum results.

Route Selected For Hallowe'en Parade Here

Will Start in South End; Prizes To Be Awarded at State Armory

A route two and a half miles in length extending from Race and Fifth streets in South Cumberland to Centre and Smith streets in North End last evening was selected for Cumberland's Hallowe'en parade which will be held the night of Thursday, October 31.

Parade plans were formulated at a meeting of the Hallowe'en committee at the chamber of commerce, Liberty Trust building. This year's celebration will be held under the joint auspices of Henry Hart Post No. 1411, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce.

Route Is Announced

The route of the parade, which will get under way at 7:30 p. m., is as follows: Race and Fifth streets to Virginia avenue, to Oldtown road, to Wineow street to Williams street to Centre street thence northward on Centre to Smith street to Mechanic street to Baltimore street to George street to Williams street to Centre street and disband.

All bands, drum corps, marching organizations and marchers from the South End will assemble at Fifth and Seymour streets at 7 a. m. Marchers from the uptown section will assemble at Commerce street and join the parade when it reaches Williams and Centre street.

At the conclusion of the parade there will be a Mardi Gras at the state armory where prizes will be awarded. Twelve judges will be appointed to name the winners.

Police Give Approval

Captain Harry Schmidt, of the B.&O. railroad police department and Oscar A. Eyerman, chief of the Cumberland police department, attended last night's meeting and declared that the route approved by the committee was the best and safest because the marchers were not required to cross the railroad tracks at any point.

Others attending the meeting were Harold W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; Robert Golladay, Thomas Whalley, Robert Miller, Lester Bollinger and James Beacham, of the V.F.W.; J. Corfield Patterson, of the Junior Association of Commerce, David W. Sloan, and Thomas F. Conlon, chairman of the parade committee.

Willkie Campaign Caravan Will Tour Allegany County

Three Moving Pictures Will Be Shown in Final Drive for Votes

Republican leaders of Allegany county yesterday received word from Baltimore that arrangements have been made for a campaign caravan to tour the twenty-three counties of the state for a final drive for votes for Wendell L. Willkie, G.O.P. presidential candidate.

W. David Tilghman, Jr., chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, who announced the caravan, told county leaders that he was elated over reports reaching him on county registration last Tuesday.

Large Turnover

"Added to the expected Republican registration," Mr. Tilghman said, "there was a large turnover of Democratic and independent voters in the counties, men and women who registered as Republicans. This trend was noted everywhere and was not confined to any particular section of the state."

According to plans announced by Tilghman, beginning early next week, a loud speaker and a motion picture truck, accompanied by a group of speakers, will leave Baltimore for a tour of the counties.

The plan calls for this party to be joined by Republicans, Democrats and independent voters as the caravan passes through the different counties. The caravan is expected to have several hundred machines when it finally returns to Baltimore, Tilghman said.

To Show Motion Pictures

At each stop three motion pictures will be shown. In these sound pictures Mr. Willkie will talk about taxes, agriculture and national conditions generally. The pictures are entitled, "The Truth about Taxes," "Willkie and McNary Know Their Farming" and "We, the People."

The date on which the campaign caravan will reach Allegany county will be announced later, county Republican leaders said.

Commissioners Hear Citizens on School Situation

Delegation Contends Beall High Building in Bad Condition

The county commissioners were greeted yesterday by a delegation of five citizens protesting against the school situation in general and the alleged bad condition of Beall high school in Frostburg.

The group wanted the commissioners to go to Frostburg with them to look the building over, but the commissioners refused after telling the delegation they were powerless to act in the situation. The absence of Chairman Simeon W. Green was also given as another reason they could not accompany the group on the proposed trip.

The delegation, consisting of Walter E. Ross, Midland; Mrs. Thomas Adams, Mt. Savage; Russell Aldridge, Woodland; Ted Lewis, Midlothian; and Floyd Winebrenner, of Carlos, was very caustic concerning the handling of the county schools by Charles L. Kopp, superintendent, and other board members.

Commissioners James Holmes and Patrick J. Stakem were sympathetic and said the group had grounds to complain but pointed out the commissioners had no authority to act in the matter.

Walter E. Ross, of Midland, referred to the new Frostburg high school, on Eckhart Flat, as "the mansion".

State Senator Robert B. Kimble suggested at a mass meeting last night in Mt. Savage that the pupils be sent to schools when the conditions are remedied. Several hundred children have been out since school opened last month.

It also was stated by the protesting group that the board of county commissioners in office some years ago, allowed the administration of schools to be taken out of their hands and given to a "dictatorial" school board.

Mr. Ross said the citizens are meeting a "stone wall" in efforts to remedy the situation, and every board to which they appeal "just passes the buck".

Other speakers were Charles M. See, this city; and Lester B. Reed, Mt. Savage, members of the House of Delegates; Benjamin Filer, Midlothian; Mrs. Adams, Ross, Winebrenner and Aldridge.

Kenny Company Has New Manager

Fred W. Chapman Succeeds Richard G. Duvall at Cumberland Office

Appointment of Fred W. Chapman, formerly of Allentown, Pa., as manager of the Cumberland branch of the C. D. Kenny company, wholesale grocers, is announced by the company's offices in Baltimore. Chapman succeeds Richard G. Duvall, who recently resigned to accept a position with the Piedmont Grocery company, of Piedmont, W. Va.

A native of Chenoa, Ill., Chapman comes to Cumberland from Allentown, Pa., where he was associated with the Lehigh Wholesale Grocery company for the past five years. Prior to that he made his home in Chicago for fifteen years where he was associated in the grocery business with the Merchants' Service Corporation and the Sprague Warner Company.

Chapman took over his new duties this week. Mrs. Chapman will arrive here from Allentown next week to make plans for establishing her home in Cumberland.

Questions should be answered by the pupils with the help of the parents and returned to the teacher on the following day. The teacher is required to take up the sheets when properly filled out and turn them over to the fire chief. It was pointed out by members of the committee that the blanks are not intended for insurance companies.

Permits Needed To Trim Trees along Roads and Streets

Urner Wigfield, district forest warden has issued a warning to all individuals, corporations and pole companies, that trimming trees and shrubbery along the right-of-way of all roads and streets, without a permit from the forestry department, will bring prosecution.

Wigfield said indiscriminate trimming will ruin trees which have taken forty years to attain their growth and the law is for the sole protection of the state's natural forest resources.

Permits can be obtained at the forestry office on the third floor, in the court house.

Four Persons Are Injured in Crash

A bus-automobile collision early Friday morning on McMullen highway near Rawlings which state police said was due to fog resulted in the injury of four persons, three women and a man.

The injured were:

Miss Mary Murphy, 25, Westernport, who was taken to Reeves Clinic in Westernport, suffering with lacerations of the head.

Mrs. Lilly Cook, 26, Westernport, who was treated for injuries to both knees.

Miss Patricia Amann, 24, Westernport, who suffered injuries to her right hand and scalp.

Arthur Vogtman, 38, Piedmont, W. Va., who was taken to the Potomac Valley hospital in Keyser, with cuts about the face. Two of his teeth were knocked out.

Charles H. Rizer, of Piedmont, was the driver and owner of the machine in which the injured persons were riding.

State police said a car driven by Harris I. Fuller, of Keyser, started to pass another machine then pulled back into line causing the Rizer machine to reduce its speed. An L. and A. Bus then crashed against the rear of the Rizer car, police reported. Gilbert F. Sanders, of Keyser was driver of the bus.

State Trooper Austin H. Bickle investigated.

Two Street Jobs Are Completed

The Cumberland Contracting Company has finished the job of blacktopping Williams street and Louisiana avenue.

The city widened and prepared both streets for resurfacing and the State Roads Commission financed the blacktopping because both streets are part of the state roads system.

Suspended Sentence Is Given Rader

Albert Rader, of near Town Creek, was given a suspended sentence of sixty days in jail and paroled for one year on an assault charge preferred by Robert Forbeck, a neighbor.

Forbeck said Rader took several swings at him and missed, then he turned his dog on him and said he was severly bitten and his clothes torn.

Rader admitted he swung at Forbeck but had not set his dog on him.

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew heard the case in trial magistrates court.

Man Given Two Years By Juvenile Court

Gerald Fletterman, 44, of Virginia avenue, was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction, yesterday in juvenile court, for contributing to the delinquency of a minor girl.

Fletterman, unmarried, was living with a thirteen-year old girl whose parents are separated, authorities said. The magistrate has not decided whether to send the girl to a training school.

The girl's mother was given six months for contributing to her delinquency, while the father has not been located.

Gateway Chatter

Cumberland is again listed by a national magazine in its Oct. 1 issue as one of the best places in the United States for concentrating sales activities, for collections, and other promotion operations of business.

Cumberland is the center of the third best high-spot territory in the United States today. Six other nearby cities make up the territory.

This district, with the four other high-spot territories, is chosen for special mention by the magazine because in it business is farther ahead of last year than in any other territory containing 1,000,000 or more population. For the territory which includes Cumberland the median gain over last year has recently been nineteen per cent.

—o—

It was a red letter day, a few evenings ago at headquarters of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion. A bunch of the boys were sitting around telling tall tales, when two stalwart, Legion uniformed vets from Akron walked in and greeted everyone.

One of these men, looked 'round the room, as if he were searching for someone in particular. Finally his eyes rested upon one well-known local veteran, Bruce Richardson, Harrison street merchant.

When Bruce saw him, no introduction was necessary. Both yelled a cordial and friendly greeting at the same time. Everyone looked on with much interest.

The Akron veteran introduced his companion to Richardson as George Overland, of the Akron post. Bruce introduced Overland and his friend, Raymond Kight, formerly of Cumberland.

The boys settled down again while Bruce and Raymond started to chat as old friends will.

It was twenty-four years ago, or just about, that these two friends and one other Edward Day stood on Baltimore street. Mere youngsters, they were. Youngsters like many of the boys one sees standing on Baltimore street talking about—the same subject Richardson and Kight and Day discussed twenty-four years ago—conscription, as it was called in those days "The Draft".

All three men wanted to enlist. They figured, like many youngsters today figure, here's a chance to serve Uncle Sam—here's a chance for adventure—here's a chance for experience, and anyway, "what can we lose."

The men waited a few days. The first draft came along. Kight and Day were drafted into the United States Army. A day or two before, Richardson had enlisted in the Marines. None of the three ever met again until a couple of nights ago in Legion headquarters.

And then only two of the old buddies were there. Richardson and Kight, for Day was killed in action in France, almost twenty-four years ago.

It was a red letter day at headquarters. It isn't often old friends meet after twenty-four years, and especially such good friends as these two were in days of their youth. It was a red letter day—and the drinks were on the house. And need Gateway add, that the boys drank a toast to their buddy—Edward Day.

Mattress Project Gets Underway

Miss Maude A. Bean, county home demonstration agent, instructed a large group from the Lonaconing, Mt. Savage, Corriganville, Pleasant Grove and Ellerslie areas in the making of ticks to be used in the mattress project.

After the ticks are made the mattresses will be finished at Fairgo during the weeks of October 11 to 31.

This project is for those families in the low-income group and not on relief.

The materials are furnished by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

The groups from Flintstone, Oldtown and Piney Plains will be instructed lated by Miss Bean.

Biehn Receives 15 Army Enlistments In Four Days

Seven Allegany Countians Answer Call; Cumiskey Pleased with Post

Keeping pace with the record-smashing month of September when eighty-four enlistments were received, Sergt. Clarence Biehn, local United States Army recruiting officer, yesterday announced that fifteen more young men have answered the call to the colors in the first four days of October.

Those who followed the advice of the posters "Join the Army Now—Why Wait" include seven Allegany countians, five West Virginians, two from Garrett county and one from Pennsylvania.

Sergt. Biehn was pleased yesterday over the receipt of a letter from Bill Cumiskey, of 410 Franklin street, who enlisted last month in which the latter said," Army life is fine. Sorry I hadn't enlisted four years ago." Cumiskey is assigned to the Army Air corps at Chanute Field, Ill.

There are two openings for assignments at Chanute Field, Ill., and four at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., Sergt. Biehn said.

Enlistments for October, including yesterday, are:

Allegany county—Francis D. Miller, 201 Fairfax avenue, Cumberland, to Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C.; William M. Jenkins, Gilmore, to Medical department, Langley field, Va.; James E. Day, Lonaconing, to Infantry, Hawaii; William E. Preston, Barton, to Quartermaster department, Panama; Charles W. Schramm, Barton, to Coast Artillery, Hawaii; Howard N. George, Barton, to Coast Artillery, Hawaii; Stanley C. Michael, Frostburg, to Air Corps, Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Union Statement Denied by Bennett

The statement issued Thursday night by C. E. Stutzman, business agent of Local 453, Teamsters and Chauffeurs Union, concerning the strike of fifteen truck drivers was refuted yesterday by Frank Bennett, acting manager of the Bennett Transfer Company, one of three local concerns involved in the strike.

Bennett declared the dispute is not over any guarantee of four-hours of work, which policy he said the company follows. He charged that the strike is an attempt by the union to force the company to sign a contract which would make it impossible to compete successfully with other companies of the same craft.

Bennett charged that the union did not have contracts with the majority of companies concerned and his company has been paying drivers and helpers union wages or better.

Gains in Employment Are Reported By Fringer, State Service Officer

National Defense Cause of More Workers Getting Private Jobs

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4. (AP)—Continued employment gains paced by national defense, with more and more workers going into private industry, were reported today by David L. B. Fringer, state employment service director.

In September, the service placed 252 persons in civil service jobs, after the civil service's own list of reserves in certain skilled trades had been exhausted, Fringer said. National defense accounted directly or indirectly for these placements, he added.

The service placed 4,293 persons in September, 3,682 in private industry, against 3,781 total placements in September, 1939. Private placements a year ago totaled 2,993.

Through September this year, 29,739 persons found private jobs, compared with 22,005 through September, 1939.

Only Cambridge and Oakland out of the service's fourteen districts reported fewer private placements for the nine months this year than in 1939. Baltimore had 18,116 private placements through sept. 30.

Captain Harry Schmidt, of the B.&O. railroad police department and Oscar A. Everman, chief of the Cumberland police department, attended last night's meeting and declared that the route approved by the committee was the best and safest because the marchers were not required to cross the railroad tracks at any point.

Willkie Campaign Caravan Will Tour Allegany County

Three Moving Pictures Will Be Shown in Final Drive for Votes

Republican leaders of Allegany county yesterday received word from Baltimore that arrangements have been made for a campaign caravan to tour the twenty-three counties of the state for a final drive for votes for Wendell L. Willkie, G.O.P. presidential candidate.

W. David Tilghman, Jr., chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, who announced the caravan, told county leaders that he was elated over reports reaching him on county registration last Tuesday.

Large Turnover

"Added to the expected Republican registration," Mr. Tilghman said, "there was a large turnover of Democratic and independent voters in the counties, men and women who registered as Republicans. This trend was noted everywhere and was not confined to any particular section of the state."

According to plans announced by Tilghman, beginning early next week, a loud speaker and a motion picture truck, accompanied by a group of speakers, will leave Baltimore for a tour of the counties.

The plan calls for this party to be joined by Republicans, Democrats and independent voters as the caravan passes through the different counties. The caravan is expected to have several hundred machines when it finally returns to Baltimore, Tilghman said.

To Show Motion Pictures

At each stop three motion pictures will be shown. In these sound pictures Mr. Willkie will talk about taxes, agriculture and national conditions generally. The pictures are entitled, "The Truth about Taxes," "Willkie and McNary Know Their Farming" and "We, the People."

The date on which the campaign caravan will reach Allegany county will be announced later, county Republican leaders said.

Commissioners Hear Citizens on School Situation

Delegation Contends Beall High Building in Bad Condition

The county commissioners were greeted yesterday by a delegation of five citizens protesting against the school situation in general and the alleged bad condition of Beall high school in Frostburg.

The group wanted the commissioners to go to Frostburg with them to look the building over, but the commissioners refused after telling the delegation they were powerless to act in the situation. The absence of Chairman Simeon W. Green was also given as another reason they could not accompany the group on the proposed trip.

The delegation, consisting of Walter E. Ross, Midland; Mrs. Thomas Adams, Mt. Savage; Russell Aldridge, Woodland; Ted Lewis, Midlothian; and Floyd Winebrenner, of Carlos, was very caustic concerning the handling of the county schools by Charles L. Kopp, superintendent, and other board members.

Commissioners James Holmes and Patrick J. Stakem were sympathetic and said the group had grounds to complain but pointed out the commissioners had no authority to act in the matter.

Walter E. Ross, of Midland, referred to the new Frostburg high school, on Eckhart Flat, as "the mansion".

State Senator Robert B. Kimble suggested at a mass meeting last night in Mt. Savage that the pupils be sent to schools when the conditions are remedied. Several hundred children have been out since school opened last month.

It also was stated by the protesting group that the board of county commissioners in office some years ago, allowed the administration of schools to be taken out of their hands and given to a "dictatorial" school board.

Mr. Ross said the citizens are meeting a "stone wall" in efforts to remedy the situation, and every board to which they appeal "just passes the buck".

Other speakers were Charles M. See, this city; and Lester B. Reed, Mt. Savage, members of the House of Delegates; Benjamin Filer, Midlothian; Mrs. Adams, Ross, Winebrenner and Aldridge.

Cumberland is again listed by a national magazine in its Oct. 1 issue as one of the best places in the United States for concentrating sales activities, for collections, and other promotion operations of business.

Cumberland is the center of the third best high-spot territory in the United States today. Six other nearby cities make up the territory.

This district, with the four other high-spot territories, is chosen for special mention by the magazine because in it business is farther ahead of last year than in any other territory containing 1,000,000 or more population. For the territory which includes Cumberland the median gain over last year has recently been nineteen per cent.

—o—

It was a red letter day, a few evenings ago at headquarters of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion. A bunch of the boys were sitting around telling tall tales, when two stalwart, Legion uniformed vets from Akron walked in and greeted everyone.

One of these men, looked 'round the room, as if he were searching for someone in particular. Finally his eyes rested upon one well-known local veteran, Bruce Richardson, Harrison street merchant.

When Bruce saw him, no introduction was necessary. Both yelled a cordial and friendly greeting at the same time. Everyone looked on with much interest.

The Akron veteran introduced his companion to Richardson as George Overland, of the Akron post. Bruce introduced Overland and his friend, Raymond Kight, formerly of Cumberland.

The boys settled down again while Bruce and Raymond started to chat as old friends will.

It was twenty-four years ago, or just about, that these two friends and one other Edward Day stood on Baltimore street. Mere youngsters, they were. Youngsters like many of the boys one sees standing on Baltimore street talking about—the same subject Richardson and Kight and Day discussed twenty-four years ago—conscription, as it was called in those days "The Draft".

All three men wanted to enlist. They figured, like many youngsters today figure, here's a chance to serve Uncle Sam—here's a chance for adventure—here's a chance for experience, and anyway, "what can we lose."

The men waited a few days. The first draft came along. Kight and Day were drafted into the United States Army. A day or two before, Richardson had enlisted in the Marines. None of the three ever met again until a couple of night's ago in Legion headquarters.

And then only two of the old buddies were there. Richardson and Kight, for Day was killed in action in France, almost twenty-four years ago.

It was a red letter day at headquarters. It isn't often old friends meet after twenty-four years, and especially such good friends as these two were in days of their youth. It was a red letter day—and the drinks were on the house. And need Gateway add, that the boys drank a toast to their buddy—Edward Day.

Gains in Employment Are Reported By Fringer, State Service Officer

National Defense Cause of More Workers Getting Private Jobs

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4. (AP)—Continued employment gains paced by national defense, with more and more workers going into private industry, were reported today by David L. B. Fringer, state employment service director.

In September, the service placed 252 persons in civil service jobs, after the civil service's own list of reserves in certain skilled trades had been exhausted, Fringer said. National defense accounted directly or indirectly for these placements, he added.

The service placed 4,293 persons in September, 3,682 in private industry, against 3,781 total placements in September, 1939. Private placements a year ago totaled 2,993.

Through September this year, 29,739 persons found private jobs, compared with 22,005 through September, 1939.

Only Cambridge and Oakland out of the service's fourteen districts reported fewer private placements for the nine months this year than in 1939. Baltimore had 18,116 private placements through sept. 30.
